Santa Venetia Man Found Slain In Bedroom Of Home

The nude body of a Santa Venetia man, apparently killed by a blow on the head with a Presto-Log, was found in bed today by a friend who arrived to drive him to work.

Found face down in a bloody bedroom at 14 Jefferson Avenue was Norman Mize, about 40, Sheriff's Capt. Harvey Teague said Mize was found at 7:10 a.m. by David D. Devaney of San Anselmo, a fellow employee of the I. Magnin's department store in San Francisco.

Investigators at the house, within hailing distance of the Hall of Justice, said they had no firm suspect this morning, but did have some leads. Mize's 1965 Dodge was found abandoned near the Red Whale Restaurant in Stinson Beach about 9 a.m.

Nothing but the car seemed to be missing from the home, investigators said.

Teague said Mize was probably bludgeoned sometime Sunday night after dining at Devaney's home and coroner's investigator Keith C. Craig confirmed the man had been dead more than 24 hours.

Craig said Mize was killed either with a compacted sawdust log or some other rounded object. A broken Presto-Log was found in the bedroom.

Neighbors interviewed knew very little about Mize, a woman's shoe salesman who rented the small, pink, two-bedroom house at 14 Jefferson. A neighbor across the street said Mize had lived in the house for about a year, but knew nothing more.

Teague said Mize's death was not discovered yesterday because it was his day off, but Devaney had tried to call him without success. Devaney told investigators he let himself in with a key this morning when he received no response from inside.

FRIGHTENED WITNESS — A small gray dog, apparently a witness to the slaying of his master in Santa Venetia, cowers in a sheriff's patrol car. The dog was picked up by the Marin County Humane Society. Officers are looking for the killer.

Devaney, according to Teague, had a key because he fed Mize's dog when Mize was away. The shivering animal was turned over to the Marin Humane Society after the killing was discovered.

The body was removed to Keaton's Mortuary in San Rafael for autopsy.

Shelter Ridge Grading Halted

By JAY GOODWIN

The Mill Valley City Council last night ordered a two-week halt on grading of Shelter Ridge for alignment of the extension of Seaver Drive and building sites for 83 houses. (Other Mill Valley council stories, page 32.)

The suspension of construction at Shelter Ridge was ordered while the state Legislature determines whether the recent California Supreme Court ruling in the Friends of Mammoth Case, requiring environmental impact statements, can be applied retroactively to projects already under way.

The council acted on a request that it revoke grading permits issued to the developers, Gene Harter and Warner Odenthal, for 83 additional houses in the development.

The council agreed that it could not revoke permits for 104 units already constructed, and that it could withhold permits from future units, not yet granted permits, until environmental impact statements are filed.

At issue were the 83 units which fell into the "grey area of the law." These units have been granted building permits but have not yet been constructed.

An attorney, representing the Enchanted Knolls Homeowners Association, argued that the new houses would create traffic, density and aesthetic problems in the area. He said the project would have a detrimental effect on the environment and, thus, the grading permits should be revoked until impact statements are filed.

City Atty. Leland H. Jordan said he didn't think the city would be upheld in court if it stopped a project substantially under way.

A resident of Enchanted Knolls then reminded the council that construction work was progressing while it made up its mind and said that a decision by the state Legislature allowing cities to require impact statements retroactively would not cover work at Shelter Ridge completed in the interim.

Developer Bradford H. McNutt told the council that the bulk of the grading work being done at Shelter Ridge was for the alignment of the Seaver Drive extension, not the 83 building sites. He said the council specifically approved Shelter Ridge on the condition that the developer extend Seaver Drive and that stopping the grading would make no sense.

City Engineer Stanley M. Bala agreed with McNutt.

With that, a member of the audience, Joseph Boss, stood up and asked if Bala should disqualify himself from the discussion because of his association with Harter and Odenthal.

Bala, as well as City Attorney Jordan, is an employee of Harter and Odenthal, working for the developer on the Meadow-sweet project that has long been a center of controversy in Corte Madera.

Obviously angered, Bala asked Boss if he was implying he had a conflict of interest. "I feel that is a rather heavy accusation," said Bala.

He later said he had been paid by the developers to prepare drawings of their proposed development about three or four years ago. He said he was making the drawings for the city at the council's request.

Boss stammered and said, "If you feel accused, don't feel accused." He added that he didn't think it was proper for an employee of the city to talk about the economic considerations of a developer.

Councilman Gerald J. Hood moved that a stop work order be issued against grading for both the road and the building sites for two weeks.

Councilman Robert E. Capron abstained from discussion and voting because, he said, his law partner, Douglas Ferguson, has represented the related Shelter Hill development for several years.

Councilman Robert E. Burton was absent.

Hood's motion passed 2 to 1, with Mayor Jean S. Barnard dissenting. She said she did not support a stop work order which prevented the grading of the Seaver Drive alignment.

October Living Costs Show Gain

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Higher prices for clothing, used cars and health insurance pushed the cost of living up 0.3 per cent in October, the government reported today.

At the same time, the purchasing power of the average wage earner took its first dip in five months.

However, the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said prices declined last month for beef, some fresh fruits and vegetables and gasoline.

The Consumer Price Index for October stood at 3.4 per cent over October, 1971.

The 0.3 per cent increase in the CPI last month was less than a 0.4 per cent advance in September and about average over the past year.

Over-all food prices went up only 0.1 per cent, smallest increase in that category since May when a 0.1 per cent decline was recorded.

Declines in beef and some other food prices last month were offset by sharp increases for pork, coffee, dairy products, eggs and sugar.

The rate for restaurant meals rose 0.2 per cent, smallest increase in eight months.

But the cost of services went up 0.4 per cent, the biggest advance since last January.

The report said more than one-third of the increased cost of living in October was due to a 1.1 per cent jump in the price of clothing, including a 1.6 per cent hike for women's and girls' apparel.

Used car prices went up 1.4 per cent while new car prices increased 0.5 per cent, less than normal for October.

The BLS said average weekly earnings of factory workers remained unchanged in October at $139.13. But because consumer prices went up, the purchasing power of their weekly earnings went down 0.3 per cent — first decline in real weekly earnings since May.

The CPI in October stood at 126.6, meaning it cost about $1.27 last month for the same kind of goods and services that $1 would buy five years ago.

The BLS said the 0.4 per cent jump in the cost of services was due to a regular, annual adjustment in the health insurance component of the index.

The cost of living index has increased at an annual rate of 3.5 per cent during the first 11 months of President Nixon's phase II economic controls.

The index rose at a rate of 3.8 per cent prior to imposition to the wage-price freeze Aug. 15, 1971.

President Nixon has only two months left to achieve his target of reducing the rate of inflation to 3 per cent by the end of this year.

Role Of U.S. When Peace Set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Washington officials say peace plans being hammered out in Paris apparently will allow a tiny U.S. military equipment delivery team to remain in Saigon after the war ends but will prevent it from advising or training South Vietnamese troops.

Informed sources told United Press International the team will most likely be patterned after a similar team now assigned to Cambodia, which numbers 77 U.S. military personnel.

Its main job would be to account for U.S. supply of arms in accordance with congressional requirements.

Defense Department spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim, in a separate interview with UPI Monday, said the crash program to arm South Vietnam with some 600 more aircraft and other war material prior to any cease-fire agreement has been essentially completed.

He said the massive buildup, which totals some 10,000 tons of equipment, ended this past weekend except for "a few things" still on the way. Now he said, U.S. military aid will revert to regular levels.

Establishment of a Military Equipment Delivery Team (MEDT) in South Vietnam after the war would mark a vast change from the Military Assistance Group (MAG) the Pentagon originally had planned for Saigon.

Both types of organization operate under the direction of the U.S. ambassador and are attached to the U.S. embassy. But a MAG mission can act as a military advisory force and provide training in the use of American weapons, while an MEDT can do neither.

Members of an MEDT handle record keeping on U.S. arms shipments, provide the reports required by Congress on disposition of the arms, and attend to logistics matters.

Sources said the transition from the present U.S. high command to an MEDT attached to the U.S. embassy in Saigon could take place gradually during the withdrawal of U.S. forces—now assumed to be 60 days—directed by the ceasefire agreement.

"The way it reads now, we'll be back to about what we have in Cambodia—in concept, although not necessarily in size," one official said.

He said this changeover will be completed at the end of the 60-day period, assuming there is no major alteration in the terms of the peace agreement during the secret negotiations now under way.

If American military personnel are prohibited from advising and training the South Vietnamese, any necessary training—such as how to fly the 30 C-130 transports supplied in the crash buildup—might be done by hired civilian personnel.

Friedheim said until a peace agreement is reached, U.S. shipments to South Vietnam will run about what they did before the accelerated buildup started.

Israel, Syria Forces Open Major Battle

Golan Heights Fighting Is Heaviest Since 1967

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Israeli and Syrian tanks, planes and artillery fought large-scale battles along their 25-mile Golan Heights cease-fire line today in the heaviest outbreak of fighting since the 1967 Six Day War.

An Israeli military spokesman in Tel Aviv said the Israelis shot down six Syrian MIG21s in their greatest victory since July 8, 1969, when they bagged seven without a loss. He said 15 Syrian tanks were knocked out by Israeli tanks and artillery in the 10-hour battle that ended at 6 p.m. (11 a.m. EST).

A Syrian military spokesman in Damascus said 14 Israeli tanks and five artillery emplacements were destroyed and two Israeli planes shot down in the battles that were the most serious in 27 months of Middle East cease-fire.

The battle—the second since

Nov. 9—was still raging at nightfall, military spokesmen on both sides announced. The situation was so serious that Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan sped to the border area to tour army positions and civilian settlements.

The daylong battle was touched off when Israeli warplanes attacked a Syrian army position and three Arab guerrilla bases seven miles inside Syria in reprisal for guerrilla raids against Israeli settlements in the occupied Golan

Kissinger, Hanoi Envoys Hold Talks Outside Paris

GIF-SUR-YVETTE, France (UPI) —White House aide Henry A. Kissinger and North Vietnamese negotiators Le Duc Tho and Xuan Thuy met today in this village outside Paris for their second round of talks aimed at ending the Vietnam War.

The Hanoi negotiators drove up in two black Citroen cars with a French plainclothed police escort at 2:40 p.m. (8:40 a.m. EST) and Kissinger arrived 15 minutes later, leading a convoy of some 30 newsmen who followed him 15 miles from Paris.

The two sides entered a white stucco red-roofed villa belonging to the French Communist party to begin their negotiations.

Kissinger has said one more round of negotiations would be enough to wrap up the ceasefire agreement, but there were mounting indications from Saigon of President Nguyen Van Thieu's dissatisfaction with the course of events.

There were hints that he might dispatch an envoy to Paris to look in on the negotiations and there were hints that he might be sending a personal letter to President Nixon once more outlining his opposition to certain terms of the agreement.

Kissinger arrived in a black Cadillac embassy car and waved to some 50 newsmen gathered by the wall around the house, formerly owned by French artist Fernand Leger.

The newsmen shouted questions but Kissinger only smiled as he drove through nine-foot high green metal gates.

Wearing a gray suit and carrying a white raincoat, he got out of his auto to shake hands with Vietnamese officials, then turned, smiling brightly, and pointed to the milling journalists.

Kissinger had a uniformed police motor cycle escort of four men, along with the newsmen who tailed him from the Paris embassy in a cortege which broke through red traffic lights on the way here.

In Saigon, Foreign Ministry press spokesman Pham Dang Sum said Kissinger is telling the North Vietnamese peace negotiators that South Vietnam still opposes portions of the Hanoi-Washington draft treaty, the official Vietnam press reported.

The Vietnam Press said Sum "reiterated the Republic of Vietnam stand that: all North Vietnamese troops must be withdrawn to the North; the cease-fire must be realized for the whole of Indochina; the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) must be respected and the roles, activities and composition of the so-called Council of Reconciliation and Concord must be clearly defined.

"The Republic of Vietnam will not carry out any agreements which did not bear the signature of the Republic of Vietnam," the official paper said Sum reported.

Kissinger and the North Vietnamese met for 4 1-2 hours Monday, and the Communists said the Hanoi negotiators had briefed Madame Nguyen Thi Binh, the Viet Cong "Foreign Minister" on progress of the talks.

It was thought earlier the two sides would meet again this morning but instead they decided to hold the second meeting in the afternoon.

State Finally Agrees On Price For West Marin Marshlands

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — West Marin rancher Waldo Giacomini's 516 acres of marshlands have been approved for purchase by the California Wildlife Conservation Board after months of haggling over the price.

Officials of the State Fish and Game Department announced yesterday that the land in the Tomales Bay area near Point Reyes Station will be purchased as a preserve for $284,875.

In June Giacomini turned down an offer of $200,000 for the property, which state appraisers said was a "fair market price." An appraiser hired by the rancher had said the land was worth $450,000.

The state had earlier budgeted $550,000 to buy Tomales Bay lands but intends to use the sum to purchase other property in addition to Giacomini's acreage.

The Giacomini property consists of a 482-acre "ecological area" of tidal flats and freshwater marsh, long a nesting and feeding place for water fowl and other wildlife; a 21-acre strip of fishing access along upper Tomales Bay, and a 13-acre fishing access at Whitehouse Pool on Papermill Creek.

Money for the purchase came from the Conservation Act of 1971, authored by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael. He has stressed the desirability of saving the wildlife preserve as well as providing access to salmon and steelhead fishing.

Giacomini's land has long been a target for conservationists, who were successful in 1971 in beating down the rancher's attempt to dike off 132 acres for pastureland.

Nature Conservancy then took an option on the property but dropped it when the state appropriation was made.

Agreement with Giacomini over the price was necessary because the Wildlife Conservation Board lacks condemnation powers.

Countdown Smooth

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — With their rocket "ready to go," Apollo 17's astronauts rehearse their part of the countdown tonight for launch Dec. 6 on America's last planned journey to the moon.

The towering Saturn 5 rocket and its three-module spaceship passed a long, realistic countdown test last night by simulating blastoff on schedule at 9:53 p.m. EST.

Because the Saturn was filled with more than one million gallons of explosive propellants, astronauts Eugene A. Cernan, Ronald E. Evans and Dr. Harrison H. (Jack) Schmitt waited until the fuel was drained before rehearsing their part of the countdown.

Ticklish Question

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Oregon's top elected officials deferred a decision today on whether to appeal a federal court ruling lifting the Elks' tax exemption in the state because of their "whites only" membership policy.

Gov. Tom McCall said he would have to confer with Att. Gen. Lee Johnson about the state's position — a political dilemma which was bound to anger either fraternal organization members or racial minorities.

The federal court ruled the state could not grant tax exemptions to the Elks because the organization's membership rules violate the U.S. Constitution.

Charge By Priests

BELFAST (UPI) — Sixty-five Roman Catholic priests accused British troops yesterday of shooting and degrading innocent persons in their zeal to suppress religious and political turmoil which has taken 635 lives in three years.

A British army spokesman denied the charge.

The accusation came on a day when three more men died — two of them British soldiers killed when a bomb exploded in an empty farmhouse five miles from the Irish Republic border. The third victim was a taxi driver who died of wounds suffered in shooting one month ago.

Summit Rejected

VIENTIANE (UPI) — Communist negotiators today rejected an offer for a summit meeting between Laotian Prime Minister Souvanna Phouma and the head of Pathet Lao.

The Communists also repeated their demands for an end to what they called "U.S. aggression in Laos."

The Pathet Lao and Laotian government meeting was the sixth formal session of the Laotian peace talks.

Football Over Oil

BURKBURNETT, Tex. (UPI) — In what would be a tough choice for many Texans to make — between oil and football — the Burk Burnett School board has decided to go down the line with its football team.

The board voted unanimously yesterday to fight oilman Sam Walton's plans to drill a well in the middle of the high school football field.

"What about the other wells operating in Burk Burnett at this time?" asked H. W. Fillmore, an attorney for Walton. "Why are you picking on Mr. Walton's wells?" "Because no one else is trying to drill on the football field," replied board member Ted Harris. "We're more concerned about the safety of our kids, who would have to play around the oil well than we are about wells in people's backyards."

Death Probe Set

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — A biracial state commission was named yesterday to find out how two black students at Southern University were killed during a showdown with police Thursday. The FBI has already begun its own, separate investigation of the incident.

Louisiana Attorney General William Guste, saying the state's "image and self respect" were at stake, announced the 12-man state commission, which includes two students.

Separate funeral services for the two students were set. Leonard Brown, 20, will be buried Wednesday in his hometown of Gilbert, La. Denver Smith, 20, of New Roads, La., will be buried Thanksgiving Day in nearby Morganza.

Lumber Firms Hit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Price Commission says almost one-third of the major lumber companies through "greed" and illegal practices have been averting price controls.

The commission indicated that it would soon cite giants of the industry for "illegal and unorthodox" business practices.

Peter Carpenter, the commission's executive director, said yesterday that a few firms have already been accused of price control violations, but that they are "small potatoes compared with what we think we're going to find."

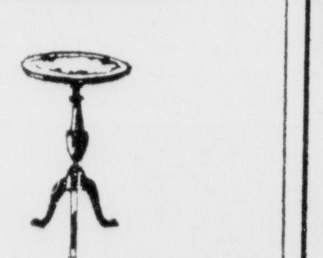

Lumber prices have continued to rise despite controls, with economists citing a decline in Canadian imports and a home building boom. But Carpenter indicated illegal dealings have also contributed to the higher prices.

In High Gear

BONN (UPI) — Chancellor Willy Brandt, riding high on his reelection triumph, speeded plans today for a series of meetings with other Western leaders and early formation of a new Social Democratic-Liberal coalition government.

Brandt told newsmen yesterday he has proposed early meetings with President Nixon and British Prime Minister Edward Heath. Officials said his meeting with Nixon would probably come during a European tour planned by the President next spring. They said Heath will visit Bonn early in the new year.

Americans Lose Two Jets In Air Action In Vietnam

SAIGON (UPI) —The U.S. command today reported the loss of two American F4 Phantom jets over North Vietnam in the past 24 hours. The two crewmen of one plane were killed and the other two were rescued from the Gulf of Tonkin.

One of the planes was shot down by a Communist anti-aircraft missile.

A total of 1,057 American planes has been lost in the air war over North Vietnam in the past eight years and 909 fliers have been killed, missing or captured, according to unofficial figures.

The toll since the air war resumed around the clock April 6 is 132 fliers lost over North Vietnam and 124 planes downed.

The first Phantom was hit Monday night by a Soviet-built surface-to-air missile. The pilot coaxed his crippled plane out over the Gulf of Tonkin and a helicopter fished him and his bombardier-navigator out of the sea unhurt 80 miles southeast of Hanoi.

The second plane crashed of unexplained causes while returning to its base at Udorn, Thailand, from a mission over North Vietnam. The plane crashed 40 miles east of Udorn. A command spokesman said he did not know whether the plane had been hit by North Vietnamese anti-aircraft fire. The pilot had not reported any damage.

Viet Cong gunners bombarded the big air base at Da Nang with nine 122mm rockets today in an attack that killed a civilian and wounded 12 others.

In the air war, bad weather again restricted American jet fighter-bomber raids against North Vietnam to fewer than 50. A sortie is one mission by one plane.

However, B52 heavy bombers which fly above the weather carried out a near-record 12 missions of about three planes

SILENT SENTINEL — Standing guard duty anywhere is a lonely and dismal job, but for this South Vietnamese soldier in Quang Tri a flooded field caused by heavy rains this week makes it especially miserable. each over the North, or about 36 sorties for an overall total of about 80 for all U.S. planes.

All were below the 20th parallel as they have been since Oct. 23 on orders from the White House during cease-fire talks.

Twelve B52 missions against the north is one short of the 13 missions flown there Aug. 12, Oct. 31 and Nov. 4.

In the ground war, heavy fighting was reported throughout South Vietnam again today in the continuing effort by both sides to gain as much ground as possible before a possible in-place cease-fire.

Margaret Says Truman Fired MacArthur Because He Panicked

NEW YORK (UPI) —President Harry S. Truman fired Gen. Douglas MacArthur as U.S. commander in Korea in 1951 because he felt MacArthur "sort of panicked," Truman's daughter said today.

Margaret Truman Daniel said her father concluded that "things were too shaky" for allied forces at the time he decided to recall MacArthur. This took place April 11, 1951, and set off a storm of protest among backers of the World War II hero.

Mrs. Daniel said her father foresaw that his decision would be unpopular, and chose to say little or nothing more about his action in the days and weeks that followed, not interfering in a big welcome home for MacArthur.

MacArthur was relieved as U.S. commander after threatening both ground and air attacks in mainland China, in pursuit of Chinese forces who aided North Korea.

MacArthur made the threats without clearing statements with Washington, as Truman had ordered.

Mrs. Daniel, who has written a book about her father, was interviewed on the NBC-TV Today Show.

Mrs. Daniel said of her father's view of MacArthur's unauthorized statements: "His reaction was that he (MacArthur) was a man who sort of panicked. All of his predictions about the Far East, and Korea, were simply wrong... He (Truman) thought things were too shaky."

MacArthur's threats about a China invasion, which Truman feared would greatly widen the Korean war, came March 25, 1951, 17 days before his removal and four months before a cease-fire and a start of negotiations to end the war.

Mrs. Daniel also was asked if Truman had any second thoughts about ordering the first use of an atomic bomb in warfare — the Hiroshima bombing in 1945.

"No," she replied. "He had no second thoughts because it did save hundreds of thousands of American lives."

Mrs. Daniel has had access to some hitherto unpublished material, from Truman's own private records, in writing her book, titled simply "Harry S. Truman."

Mrs. Daniel was asked today of her father's opinion of Adlai E. Stevenson, who won the Democratic presidential nomination in 1952, as well as in 1956, after Truman declined to run for re-election in 1952.

"We all liked him immensely," Mrs. Daniel said, but added: "Basically, he didn't like people... He didn't understand the man in the street."

On the other hand, she said her father held a "real belief from the very beginning" of the 1948 campaign that he could upset favorite Thomas E. Dewey "if he could be seen by enough people and talk to them."

"It was kind of hard work," Mrs. Daniel said, and because of short campaign funds, "we barely got the (campaign) train out of the station from time to time."

PT&T Asks To Change Refund Plan

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Pacific Telephone Co. has requested it be allowed a change in the plan to refund $11.2 million of the $175 million a court has ordered returned to Californians.

A hearing Monday before the state Public Utilities Commission heated up when counsel for the Public Interest Law Center alleged Pacific Telephone was using the hearing as a "cover-up." What the utility really wants, said Frederick N. Bray, a lawyer with the law center, is to block a class action lawsuit that seeks the $11.2 million refund plus $36 million damages.

The California Supreme Court last June ordered the $175 million refund after overturning a $143 million annual rate increase approved in 1971 by the Public Utilities Commission.

Sam A. Godfrey, the utility's assistant comptroller, testified Pacific Telephone discovered in late August that its computers can be programmed more precisely to locate individual customers who have been overcharged.

The telephone company wants approval of a decision to refund the money to individual customers, rather than follow the earlier order to distribute the money on a pro-rata basis among all Pacific Telephone customers.

But Bray said the company lied in documents filed with the California and U.S. Supreme Courts earlier this year. The utility said it knew the precise amounts customers would get back when or if the courts ordered a refund.

The class action lawsuit was brought by the Public Interest Law Center when it discovered that PT&T did not know who should get the $11.2 million refund, Bray said.

After the lawsuit was filed in Superior Court, Bray said, the phone company sought the hearing to get approval of the actual refund plan, thereby wiping out the lawsuit.

The commission will issue a decision on the dispute later.

Founder Of Fascist Party Is Honored

MADRID (UPI) — Chief of State Generalissimo Francisco Franco and Prince Juan Carlos of Spain attended a service Monday to commemorate the death 36 years ago of Jose Antonio Primo de Rivera, founder of the Falange, Spain's original Fascist party.

The service took place at the site of a cathedral carved out of a hillside 40 miles from the capital as a memorial to those who fell during the Spanish Civil War. Franco placed the symbolic laurel crown and five roses on the tomb of Jose Antonio before leaving the church.

$37,000 Is Paid For Picasso Work

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A Picasso painting brought the high price Monday in an auction of 106 pieces of impressionist art for a total of $638,000. Promoters said it was the most successful art auction ever held on the West Coast.

Titled "Le Peintre et son Midele," the Picasso brought $37,000. Also included in the bidding were a number of drawings and sculptures, with an Alexander Calder mobile selling for $14,000.

U.S., Cuba Set Hijacking Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The United States expects to begin indirect negotiations with Cuba on a broad agreement to foil hijackers this week, possibly on Wednesday, State Department officials said today.

The officials reported that Cuban authorities have proposed that the talks begin on Wednesday and the State Department informed the Swiss embassy here to tell its diplomats in Havana to proceed at their earliest convenience. The Swiss handle U.S. diplomatic contacts with Cuba.

The indirect exchanges will renew U.S.-Cuban negotiations of 1969 and 1970 on a possible hijacking accord which became stalemated. Those earlier negotiations, and the negotiations to begin shortly, were carried on by Swiss diplomats in Havana.

Cuba has become increasingly annoyed and concerned about the continuing hijackings from the United States to its territory. In a diplomatic note Oct. 30 and in a Havana Radio broadcast Nov. 15 the Cuban government signalled its desire to reopen negotiations with the United States.

It was understood that the Cuban foreign ministry has already developed a number of draft proposals for the consideration of the United States. Swiss diplomats will receive these proposals and forward them to Washington. The Swiss diplomats will also seek any necessary clarifications and serve as a pipeline to transmit American proposals or counter-proposals.

The 1969-1970 talks broke down over the Cuban insistence that any agreement to return American hijackers to the United States should be coupled with an American commitment to return to Cuba people who flee illegally to the United States. In the last six years, U.S. officials said, 3,000 Cubans have fled to the United States in small boats and rafts to seek political asylum.

In a related development, the State Department spokesman, Charles W. Bray III, announced Monday that Cuban authorities have declined to return the hijackers of a Southern Airways jetliner. The Cubans stated that the hijackers could not be returned because they are to be tried in Cuba "on certain charges, including extortion in various forms."

Officials here explained that the Cuban extortion charge involved the hijackers efforts to obtain jet fuel through force.

BART Admits Goof On Control System

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Engineers for the Bay Area Rapid Transit system said Monday they skipped preliminary testing of a $35 million automatic train control system in order to save time and money.

The untried computer control for the line's 75-mile network isn't operating well enough on the East Bay portion of the system to permit trains to operate without the use of attendants to see if sections of track are clear.

safety and financial management.

His reply was approved 9-1. All ten directors said they are now convinced that BART is operating safely on the 26-mile stretch open between Oakland and Fremont.

Personal Income Of Americans Rises Sharply

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Commerce Department report showed today personal income of Americans climbed $15.2 billion in October, the largest increase since the spring of 1971.

The report said, however, that more than half of the jump was due to higher social security benefits. Personal income other than the social security increase was up $7.2 billion, compared to $6.8 billion in September, to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $962 billion.

Personal income includes wages and salaries, business earnings, income from property and securities, and social insurance and welfare benefits.

The $15.2 billion increase was the largest since the $20 billion increase of June, 1971, which also reflected a boost in Social Security payments.

Hopes Fading For School Aid Bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The 1972 legislature's efforts to provide long-promised property tax relief and new school aid threatened once again today to "blow skyhigh."

Negotiators on a $1.2 billion bill supported by Gov. Ronald Reagan and Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, emerged gloomily from Monday's closed door session on the measure.

They had just heard demands from Senate opponents, led by Sen. Nicholas C. Petris, D-Oakland, that the bill be rewritten and include more money for urban schools.

One conference committee member, Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, said if Petris' amendments were accepted "we'd blow the package skyhigh and all we'd have is a puff of feathers."

Moretti, also a conference committee member, said the amendments would "rewrite the whole bill."

"If we were to agree, there's no possible way we could get a (big enough) vote in either house," Moretti declared.

While the committee met, the Senate narrowly passed, 21-15, a $575 million school finance bill which supporters said would comply "reasonably well" with the state Supreme Court's historic Serrano decision. It would also provide a "modest" amount of property tax relief.

Sen. John Harmer, R-Glen Dale, opposed the measure by Assemblyman Leroy Greene, D-Sacramento, declaring it would "erode the possibility" negotiators could reach an agreement on the Reagan-Moretti bill.

The court's Serrano decision held that the present method of financing schools is unconstitutional because it relies too heavily on local property taxes, thus unfairly penalizing children in low wealth districts.

Greene's bill now goes back to the Assembly for concurrence in Senate amendments.

Petris' proposed amendments, to the Reagan-Moretti bill sources said, would provide $100 million to urban schools, increase renter tax relief and remove most of the limitations on local property tax increases.

The latter feature is insisted upon by Reagan.

The amendments also would freeze the current county expenditures for welfare with the state picking up any future cost increase, appropriate more federal revenue sharing funds and divert more of a proposed increase in the statewide sales tax to help schools.

One high level Reagan administration official expressed pessimism after the latest negotiating session that the legislature could agree on a measure which would be agreeable to all factions.

The Assembly has already passed the Reagan-Moretti bill but it has been rejected twice by the Senate. The most recent defeat was on Nov. 8 when it fell two votes short of approval.

Assembly and Senate negotiators had hoped to make minor amendments to the bill to pick up the two votes they needed.

But one conferee, Assemblyman Joe A. Gonsalves, D-La Mirada, said of the Senate Democratic opponents, "They're living in an unreal world. You can't rewrite the bill at this stage."

The measure would increase the state sales from five cents to six cents on the dollar, double the homeowners' income tax exemption, provide about $520 million to schools and increase business inventory tax relief. It would also raise bank and corporation taxes by 1.4 per cent.

Asked about the possibility of reaching an accord before the legislature adjourns Dec. 1, Moretti replied, "Honest to God, I can't tell you."

He said, however, he planned to continue to attempt to work out an agreement.

Quick-Freezer Being Built For Fishermen

FULLERTON (AP) — Baja California fishing fleets may soon have use of a mobile quick-freeze plant that will cut costs and increase the supply of fish to Southern California.

Built by Kohlenberger Inc. here, the mobile plant will travel up and down the Baja roads, freezing fish shortly after they are caught.

The mobile unit consists of seven 40-foot trailers and was built for a La Paz fishing firm.

Now there are only two permanent quick-freeze plants, one at La Paz at the southern tip of the peninsula and the other at Rosarita Beach, located just west of Tijuana.

Urban School Needs Not Met, Senators Tell Oakland Group

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Two key Democratic senators told a rally of 1,500 persons who traveled from Oakland to the Capitol Monday that the $1.2 billion tax shift-school finance bill would fall far short of meeting the needs of urban schools.

Sen. Nicholas C. Petris, D-Oakland, a member of a conference committee working on the measure, and Senate Democratic leader George Moscone, were cheered by the throng.

The crowd booed a representative of Gov. Ronald Reagan when he said the governor supported the bill. The measure is also backed by Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys.

Oakland school district officials estimated about 3,000 persons journeyed to the Capitol to support more state aid for their district. About half of that number attended the rally on the west steps of the Capitol.

Petris declared the $1.2 billion proposal is primarily a property tax relief bill. He said it does not provide enough money for urban schools which need additional support "very, very sorely."

Assemblyman Willie L. Brown Jr., D-San Francisco, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, promised the group, "There will be no school bill enacted in this state that does not contain an urban factor as defined by Willie Brown."

Another Bond For Novato Pool Asked

The Novato Parks and Recreation Advisory Commission last night recommended that the city call a new bond election for construction of a community swimming pool, but this time provide the public with more information on the plan.

A $500,000 bond proposal for a pool was defeated at the polls Nov. 7, gaining a favorable vote of 6,625 to 5,026, but falling short of the needed two-thirds majority.

The vote showed that a clear majority wanted a pool. Recreation Director Edward W. Adams said.

Commissioners recommended that the city get a feasibility report including cost, preliminary sketches, an estimate of construction time and set the exact location of the proposed pool, Adams said.

The commission's recommendation is to be forwarded to the city council tonight.

Commissioners also nominated two organizations and one individual for outstanding service awards to be presented by District One of the California Parks and Recreation Society in January.

Nominated were LeRoy M. Gerner of 6 Ramona Way for his work in creating Gerner Park along Novato Creek, the Novato Rotary Club for its work in creating a picnic area at Miwok Park and the Novato Kiwanis Club for its work at the Novato Prehistory Museum.

Adams said commissioners also are considering changing the Teen Club at Novato High School from summer operation to all year.

Commissioners Walter W. Vater, Wilkes Lou Johnson and Donald A. Greenhalgh were absent. The commission's next meeting will be at 8 p.m. Dec. 4 at the Novato Community House.

Open Space Map Will Be Viewed

The San Anselmo Planning Commission and the citizens advisory committee on the general plan will meet in joint session at 8 p.m. Monday in city hall.

The commission last night said a tentative map of open space acquisition areas will be studied at the meeting. The citizens' open space subcommittee prepared the map after hiking open space areas in the city, according to Thelma Foster, commission secretary.

A general plan zone map will also be considered at the public session, she said.

The San Anselmo Planning Commission also:

Heights. Syria replied with artillery and tanks and Israeli artillery and tanks went into action. Syria sent up its airforce of Soviet-made supersonic MIG21s and a series of dogfights followed, the battle intensifying during the day.

UPI correspondent Richard Gross in Tel Aviv said a senior Israeli officer summing up the day's action reported no Israeli planes or tanks were lost but that one civilian was killed. Two other civilians and a soldier were reported wounded.

A military spokesman said two of the MIG21s were downed in a midafternoon dogfight and the four others as a formation of Syrian planes attempted to attack Israeli positions on the occupied heights.

"All Israeli planes returned safely," the announcement said. Syria also reported all of its planes returned safely.

There was no immediate word on whether any Syrian bombs had fallen on Israeli positions, the spokesman said.

The Syrian air raid came as artillerymen on both sides of the line slugged it out along the battle front, with tanks blazing away into each other's ranks.

UPI correspondent John Sims, in Beirut, said Damascus Radio reported battles the entire length of the cease-fire line with a military spokesman reporting two Israeli warplanes shot down by Syrian aircraft and ground fire.

The fighting followed the Nov. 9 pattern of clashes between the two countries.

The military spokesman, quoted by Damascus radio, said today's clashes started after Israeli air attacks on a Syrian army border post at 9 a.m. (2 a.m. EST) and the bombardment of "areas inhabited by civilians in the area of Jinnin" an hour and a half later.

"In retaliation to the Israeli air aggressions of this morning our heavy artillery bombarded enemy positions in the Mansoura and Jibbin areas of the Northern and Southern sectors of the front. Our fire inflicted direct hits on enemy targets," the spokesman said.

Reporting on the dogfights, the Syrian spokesman said 16 planes from each side were involved in an aerial battle over the Golan Heights at 1 p.m. (6 a.m. EST).

"One Israeli warplane was shot down and was seen falling in flames west of al Khunieh, near the cease-fire line," the spokesman said.

An earlier bulletin said another Israeli warplane was brought down by "Syrian air defense systems."

The last time the two countries fought Syria said four Israeli planes and two Syrian aircraft were shot down. Israel said two Syrian MIGs were shot down then and that Israel suffered no air losses.

Israel struck the first blow in what the command said was in reprisal for recent guerrilla infiltrations into the occupied part of the heights, seized from Syria in the 1967 Middle East War.

"Our policy is to make it more difficult for them," Foreign Minister Abba Eban told newsmen in Jerusalem.

"Therefore, when they undertake their training and assembling and preparation and arming in order to make raids against us, if we can get at them first, then we contribute to a diminution of terrorist attacks and the need to retaliate," he said.

"I'm quite certain that if we just let them operate freely and without hindrance, there would be more raids and more attacks," Eban said.

UAL Is Sued For Overcharge

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A freelance journalist Monday filed a $5 million class action suit against United Air Lines for alleged overcharges on flights to small cities.

Stetteland's suit said UAL and other airlines regularly overcharge on flights to small cities that require a change of airline en route.

UAL declined comment on the action.

Board In Action On Condemnation

Ross Valley Sanitary District directors last night adopted a resolution of intent to condemn 41 acres of T. I. Properties and other holdings around the sewage treatment plant on the San Quentin Peninsula.

The action was decided upon at a secret meeting of the sanitary district board Nov. 9.

The district may not actually file condemnation suits for several months, according to Ned J. Ongaro, district manager. "I don't know whether we'll ever file," Ongaro added.

The resolution comes in the midst of plans of the City of Larkspur to rezone the peninsula for a major apartment development and commercial center proposed on the T. I. Properties' holdings at the old Hutchinson Quarry, and a restaurant at the old Remillard brick works.

The Larkspur Planning Commission has scheduled a continued hearing on the rezoning for 8 p.m. today at city hall.

The sanitary district resolution cited an order by the Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board for a subregional sewage treatment and pollution control plant jointly to serve the Ross Valley and San Rafael, Ongaro reported. At the Larkspur Planning Commission's hearing Oct. 24 on the peninsula rezoning, sanitary district officials

Driver Gets Jail Time On Charge

A 29-year-old San Anselmo man, arrested after his car hit a motorcycle in Larkspur in June, was ordered yesterday to serve 24 weekends in jail for felony drunken driving.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court, who ordered the jail time, then said, "This sort of conduct has to be stopped before somebody gets killed."

Kaczmarek, a utility man for the Marin Municipal Water District, was arrested in a San Rafael bar after he cut off a motorcycle on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard near Highway 101. The cycle crashed and its rider was treated at a local hospital for minor injuries.

Kaczmarek told a probation officer that the pressures of bills and a divorce drove him to drink. He had been previously arrested and convicted of drunken driving this year.

Kaczmarek's sentence had been negotiated last month and included dismissal of a hit-run driving count.

J. Mueller Found Dead At His Home

James Walter Mueller, 44, former Petaluma resident, was found dead yesterday at his home in Windsor.

The Sonoma County coroner's office said Mueller was found with a plastic bag taped on his head. He had reportedly been despondent in recent months.

Mueller was a native of Wisconsin and had lived in Petaluma 24 years before moving to Windsor. He was employed by the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. in Sonoma.

He was a member of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Union Local No. 1245 and Pacific Service Employees Association.

He is survived by his wife, Helen M.; two sons, Steven and Michael Mueller; and two daughters, Beverly and Cheryl Mueller, all of Windsor.

Funeral arrangements were pending today at the Parent Funeral Chapel, Petaluma.

Nuclear Error Victim Is Dead

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Lekoj Anjain, 19, one of several hundred South Pacific villagers poisoned by a nuclear mistake 18 years ago, died last week at a government hospital and his body was on its way back today to tiny Rongelap Island, a UC Berkeley instructor said.

Roger Gale, member of Friends of Micronesia and a former professor on Guam, said the youth died of leukemia after being contaminated by radiation following a U.S. hydrogen bomb blast on Bikini Island in 1954.

Anjain was just a year old when freak winds swept "hot" nuclear particles over his remote island during the government's early nuclear atmospheric tests in the Marshall Islands, Gale said.

Sun Powers New Quake Stations

PASADENA (UPI)—The Cal Tech seismological laboratory had two new earthquake-monitoring stations on duty today, small robot units powered by the sun.

The stations are in In-Ko-Pah Park, 50 miles east of San Diego and just north of the international border, and in the Joshua Tree National Monument in the lower Mojave Desert.

They bring to 26 the number of stations scattered from the border to the Santa Barbara area and Bishop to San Clemente Island.

Eight Hopefuls Seek To Fill Council Seat

The chairman of the Marin County Planning Commission and another San Rafael planning commissioner have filed for appointment to the San Rafael City Council.

Jack G. Nixon, a San Rafael insurance man and chairman of the county commission, and James Dougan, a San Rafael insurance agent and planning commissioner, have filed letters of application for the post left vacant by the recent death of Harry A. Barbier, according to City Mgr. James H. McCown.

McCown said eight applicants had filed for the post by yesterday's deadline: Dr. Gar C.

May, a San Rafael optometrist; Richard C. Fox, a research chemist; John A. Starkweather, president of the Dixie School District board; Thomas R. O'Toole, a San Rafael planning commissioner; Albert J. Boro, a San Rafael planning commissioner; Carl J. (Red) Brown, athletic director of Sir Francis Drake High School, and Nixon and Dougan.

The council last night said it will interview candidates individually, but made no mention of whether or not the interviews will be conducted in closed or open session. City Mgr. James H. McCown and City Atty. Fred E. Robbins said today they did not know whether the interviews will be held in closed session.

The council declared it will fill the post by Dec. 4.

Tiny Tot Found On Busy Street

OAKLAND (UPI)—Police today waited for a frantic call from a mother missing her 2-year-old daughter.

The blonde, blue-eyed child, clad in blue and white pajamas, narrowly escaped injury as she crawled across McArthur Boulevard in Oakland at 3:30 a.m.

A passing truck driver, A.L. Porter, Oakland, saw her and stopped to pick her up. A cab driver, Edward Russel, 55, called for police.

The girl was taken to a foster home to await her mother's call.

Borman Is Eyed For Cabinet Post

MIAMI (UPI)—Former astronaut Frank Borman is under consideration by President Nixon for appointment as secretary of transportation, it was reported today.

The Miami Herald quoted "high Republican sources" as saying Borman was being considered, but added that the White House said "no decisions" have yet been made on any changes at the upper levels of the Nixon administration.

Council Holds Up Hillside Project

By NELS JOHNSON

The San Rafael City Council last night postponed action on a proposal to develop a graded hillside north of the county Civic Center after declaring the project's environmental impact report inadequate.

The council told contractor Arthur R. Nicolaisen — who has proposed a six-story office building, restaurant, service station and car wash for the 15-acre site across from the Terra Linda interchange — to come back after developing a more detailed impact report.

City planning staff and the planning commission had found Nicolaisen's environmental impact report adequate, saying "aspects... that are detrimental have been mitigated to a major degree."

But the council balked at an apparent lack of adequate public input in compiling the report, noting a state Supreme Court ruling requires public participation in developing the statements.

Councilman Lawrence E. Mulryan also asked that the report compare the impact of Nicolaisen's latest proposal with an earlier plan to develop the hillside with a motel and office complex. Nicolaisen received approval to proceed with the earlier motel plan in 1970, but scrapped the proposal when the Holiday Inn was constructed nearby.

"The public input has not been sufficient, and I want an update of the environmental impact of both proposals," Mulryan said. No environmental impact report has been filed for the earlier plan.

Attorney Albert Bianchi, representing Nicolaisen, said the new proposal will "blend into the hillside" amid Mediterranean landscaping, complete with 35-foot olive trees.

He claimed traffic generated by the development could be adequately handled by the Terra Linda interchange, and cited the opening of the Sears store in the Northgate shopping center which "drew 5,000 to 15,000 people and created no traffic jams."

A traffic consultant hired by Nicolaisen said the proposal would generate about 1,500 cars daily. Major entrance and exit of the development would be 250 feet south of the interchange, he said.

Councilmen noted a county study — which calls the interchange "one of the most dangerous freeway exits in the county" — claimed the Nicolaisen proposal would draw up to 2,000 cars a day.

Nicolaisen said he has already spent $150,000 on the plan and estimated his project would pump $140,000 in tax monies into city coffers annually.

Attorney Joseph A. Forrest, representing the Terra Linda Homeowners Association, urged the council to develop an independent report on the project, saying Nicolaisen's report made no provision for the public's views. "The objections of the public must be considered by law," he said.

One Terra Linda resident declared planning commission hearings on the plan had provided no public participation, because the commission was unresponsive.

Others urged the plan be scrapped until the state Division of Highways improves the Terra Linda interchange.

Nicolaisen, who appeared last night to ask the council to rezone the parcel to allow the project to proceed, said he will develop a new report, but did not say when it will be submitted.

San Rafael Council Adopts City Redevelopment Plan

A redevelopment plan aimed at revitalizing the sagging economy of Central San Rafael was adopted last night without debate by the San Rafael City Council.

The action capped a long string of turbulent hearings on the proposal.

The council set 7 p.m. Nov. 27 in city hall as the time of a joint session with the city's board of education to discuss an agreement whereby the redevelopment agency will return to the school system some tax revenues normally frozen under redevelopment.

The council has proposed that tax revenues resulting from increases in assessed valuation of up to 4 per cent in the redevelopment area be returned to the school system. The board has issued a counterproposal which asks for a flat 4 per cent return, as well as requesting several changes in the redevelopment plan and procedure.

"The counter-proposal is in substantial variance with ours... we'll have to discuss it in joint session," said William J. Bielser, agency director and assistant city manager.

The San Rafael City Council Also:

PARKS — After closed session, announced the appointment of John A. Govi, 207 Devon Drive, to the parks and recreation commission. Govi takes the place of commissioner Fred E. Jensen, whose term expired. Reappointed to the commission were Norma Wall and Robert C. Schoen.

Miskimen opposed the measure, saying it was inflationary. A request by the Ecumenical Association for Housing to exempt moderate income units from the tax was continued pending legal review.

Comprehensive Health Plan Seen For U.S.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A Rutgers professor predicted Monday that the United States would have a comprehensive national health plan within 10 years.

One by-product, Mrs. Anne Ramsay Somers told a news conference, would be the end of the distinction between public and private hospitals.

The professor of community medicine, here to deliver the first annual Mark Berke memorial lecture at Mt. Zion Hospital, said to end the current "anarchy and chaos" in public health states should set up public health organizations on a regional level to administer and coordinate health care.

Goldenaires Delay Whistle Stop Move

The San Rafael City Council last night postponed consideration of an agreement to house the Goldenaires senior citizens club at the Whistle Stop on Tamalpais Avenue amid some club members' apparent fear of relocating in the facility.

The Goldenaires — who now use the old county courthouse annex as a headquarters — must move by January to make way for the McKeon Courthouse Square project.

But some club members — even though faced with no other alternative — are balking at the proposal to meet in the Whistle Stop, now used by the county seniors' group.

"The facilities at the Whistle Stop are not adequate," one elderly woman declared. "There's no storage area and not enough space for the Needlework Guild," she said.

Another man warned that club supervisor Nancy Person and clerk Lillian Parkinson "will be taken off the payroll if we move to the Whistle Stop." He claimed that some seniors had not been informed of a vote in which club members decided 78-15 to move to the new facility.

But another man, saying that critics of the move "are a small minority who never attend meetings," declared that "when you're out in the rain, it's good to have an umbrella."

Councilmen, wary of entering the fray, told parks director Andrew J. Snyder to conduct a postcard poll of all 768 club members on the proposal to use the Whistle Stop. "A simple majority will rule," said Mayor C. Paul Bettini.

Snyder told the council that the agreement with the Marin Senior Coordinating Council concerning use of the Whistle Stop would provide for facilities, housing and recreational programs at a cost of $20,000 annually. The parks department, which has supervised club operations, will hand the responsibility to the coordinating council under the agreement, he said.

"The city will be responsible for enforcement of the contract," he said, adding that Mrs. Person and the club clerk will be reassigned to other parks duties.

He said the Whistle Stop can accommodate 400 people, while the courthouse annex has a capacity of 100.

cials yesterday that Posteuca's daughter, Mrs. Donna Varcol, 33, and her 3-year-old son, Alexander, have been granted a 30-day permit to visit his bedside. The poet was comforted by Sister Irma Lughu as he heard the news.

Corte Madera Votes Go-Ahead On Open-Space Bond Election

The Corte Madera Town Council last night decided to go ahead with an open space bond election next year, mindful of county hints that regional park district money will go only to those who help themselves.

The council didn't debate how much the bond issue will be, but merely instructed Town Manager Ronald E. Bartels to bring to its Dec. 4 meeting a draft resolution of "public necessity and convenience", a legal step required for a special bond election.

Councilman Robert J. Flahive urged the election, saying, "Let's get going. It's been mentioned by (supervisors) Wornum and Giacomini that the county's feeling on county money is that they're going to look more favorably on those towns that have helped themselves."

Bartels also was instructed to bring to the next meeting a list of all undeveloped parcels over one-acre in size, a list previously prepared by town staff.

Mayor Holmes S. (Pete) Norville, said the list would assist councilmen in determining how much bond indebtedness the town should incur.

"If we set it too low we won't be able to buy anything," he said, "and if we set it too high we can't stand the tax rate." Neither would they get the necessary two-thirds majority vote in favor, he added.

The open space issue came up after midnight, with only a small audience remaining, and councilmen in amicable agreement.

But earlier when the subject of redevelopment emerged briefly, the capacity audience bombarded the council with questions.

Mayor Norville has previously announced that the town's redevelopment project must be given the go-ahead by Dec. 31 to take advantage of freezing assessed valuations at this year's level. In answer to an audience question, he said that the Dec. 11 public hearings on the redevelopment project is the only public hearing required by law.

"That's decision-making time," he predicted, "it's either fish or cut bait next year. I anticipate input from everyone on Dec. 11."

The hearing will be held in the Corte Madera Recreation Center at 7:30 p.m. to accommodate the large crowd anticipated, he added.

Councilman Harold B. Wagstaff announced what he considered "may constitute something of a bomb to my colleagues" by saying that he personally wouldn't vote in favor of the redevelopment plan until he'd done all the deliberating justified.

"Dec. 31 means nothing to me if between now and Dec. 31 I find there are substantial problems entitled to public debate and investigation," he said.

His statement was applauded by the audience, many of them members of the Corte Madera Town Meeting, which had asked for environmental impact study on the proposed redevelopment plan before it went ahead.

Jail Is Wrecked By Partygoers

WEED, Calif. (UPI) —The small police force of this northern California community had some mopping up to do in the local jail Monday.

While officers made round-trips to a local residence to haul in 24 exuberant partygoers, the arrested persons wrecked the jail.

One policeman left at the jail to guard those being brought in was unable to control the partying crowd, which kicked in the ceiling, smashed furniture and ripped out plumbing.

When the police force finally got everyone behind bars, the suspects were restrained, but not until one officer had to get a tetanus shot after a young woman bit him and the floors were flooded from broken plumbing.

The 22 adults and two juveniles were arrested for being in a Weed home where marijuana was in use. Police said additional charges may be filed.

Plan Modification Due Public Hearing

The Corte Madera Planning Commission will hold a public hearing on planning consultants Sedway and Cooke's recommendations for interim modifications to the town's general plan at its meeting at 7:30 p.m. today in the town hall.

The modifications all relate to the area east of Highway 101 slated for redevelopment, and the commission will also review the proposed Corte Madera redevelopment plan, which is destined to accommodate a regional shopping center.

Housing At Quarry Site Approved

Despite pleas of financial hardship from American Savings and Loan Association, the Corte Madera Town Council last night rezoned the quarry site to R-1 Planned Unit Development, a category which will permit up to 111 housing units clustered in the site's center.

The savings and loan firm battled for higher density R-2 zoning saying the R-1 zoning would depreciate the quarry's value by $200,000. Its attorney, Julius Selinger, in swift succession pleaded for delay of the public hearing, argued it hadn't been properly publicly noticed, challenged the validity of the zoning, threatened legal action, and even compared himself to a hero of Greek mythology who had been directed to haul a boulder up a cliff, and kept slipping back.

It was all to no avail. After a two-hour hearing, the council voted 3-1 to rezone the 23.69 acre quarry to R-1. Mayor Holmes S. (Pete) Norville and Councilmen Herber C. Leney and Robert J. Flahive voted in favor. Councilman Harold B. Wagstaff dissented, favoring instead the R-2 zoning, which would have allowed a maximum of 209 housing units. Councilman Edward W. Colthurst was absent, sick with the flu.

The decision was greeted with wild applause from the large audience that packed the town's small council chamber, leaning against the walls and squatting on the floor. Most had attended the long series of council and planning commission hearings on the quarry, site that had strung out since June.

Under the planned unit development, the R-1 zoning takes into account the entire acreage of the densely wooded bowl behind the Corte Madera Regional Library. However, only about 5.5 acres is level enough to build on. The rest of the land, mostly steeply sloping, would be dedicated as open space.

Howard Lawson, vice president and property manager of American Savings and Loan, said the company paid $442,289 for the quarry in July 1967, acquiring it by foreclosing on money they'd lent on it. Legal costs brought the price up to $524,598.

Since that time property taxes of $7,000 a year had been paid, and in August this year it was appraised at $699,071. A written offer of purchase had been for $550,000 said Lawson, but didn't say when the offer was made.

"If the R-1 PUD zoning is applied, our appraiser says its value would be between $330,000 and $400,000," said Lawson, claiming financial hardship would result to the company.

The property's assessed valuation was about $250,000, Selinger said, in reply to a question from Robert Dunn in the audience.

The council considered a report on the property prepared by planning consultants Sedway and Cooke, which recommended R-2 planned unit development zoning. Its current zoning was R-4.

Thomas Cooke told the council he favored R-2 because it would permit three-story buildings with parking beneath. An R-1 zoning might end up with bulkier structures, he said, because they couldn't go so high.

To applause from the audience Dunn, who said he lives near the quarry, said the first thing anyone would see coming west off the freeway "would be three story buildings, 209 units of 5.5 acres."

Wagstaff said he was wary of "down-zoning" land to destroy its potential, thus creating a situation where the owner went into bankruptcy. He felt the planning commission could "hold down" the maximum 209 units under R-2.

But Norville said he had learned from last week's joint meeting with Mill Valley and Larkspur councils on the Northridge Open Space plan, that purchase wasn't necessarily the only way to acquire open space... "it can be created by proper use of the land," he argued. "But we have to keep it as a unit to confine construction and leave the majority as open space."

What do doctors recommend for patients in pain?

Doctors all over the country dispense up to 50,000,000 of these tablets to their patients each year.

There are many medications a physician or dentist can prescribe for pain. Some are narcotic, many are available only on prescription. But there is one pain reliever, available without prescription, doctors dispense again and again... Anacin.

Each year, doctors give up to 50,000,000 Anacin tablets to their patients in pain. If doctors think enough about Anacin to dispense all these tablets, what better recommendation can you ask when you are in pain?

You see, Anacin contains more of the pain reliever doctors recommend most than any other leading tablet.

Headache and dental pain is relieved incredibly fast; minor pains of arthritis are dependably eased for hours; even the aches and pains of colds and flu respond to Anacin. So the tension and depression that can be caused by such pain will be relieved too. And millions take Anacin without stomach upset.

When you're in pain, why don't you follow the practice of so many doctors and take the tablet a doctor might give you in his own office. Take Anacin!

Flames shoot skyward as firemen pour water into historic Robinson's department store in downtown Singapore. Newsmen said yesterday's fire totally destroyed the 114-year-old landmark store facing Raffles Place and store officials said 12 persons are known missing and presumed dead. Scores of shoppers were trapped on upper floors and in elevators when the fire broke out, apparently in rooftop Christmas decorations. (UPI Telephoto)

A HOLIDAY DINNER FOR THE NEEDY

Four downtown San Rafael churches will host a Thanksgiving dinner for needy persons from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Thursday at the Whistle Stop, 980 Tamalpais Avenue, San Rafael.

The dinner is aimed primarily at senior citizens, but needy persons living alone are welcome as well, according to the sponsors.

Up to 14 turkeys, as well as pies and vegetables, have been donated thus far.

The four churches are: St. Raphael's Catholic Church, St. Paul's Episcopal Church, First United Methodist Church and First Presbyterian Church.

Sonoma Bus Service Still Just A Dream

Improved commuter bus service for Southern Sonoma remains a dream rather than a reality, the Rohnert Park City Council was told yesterday.

Dale W. Luehring, manager of the Golden Gate Bridge District, told councilmen that Rohnert Park and other parts of Sonoma County warrant better commuter service, but buses simply are not available.

Luehring and bridge district director William R. Lucius said the district is moving as fast as possible to increase the number of buses for Rohnert Park and Petaluma, but that few changes will be seen in the near future.

Luehring said commuter business has increased 10 per cent in Sonoma County since the bridge district went into the bus business. He said the equivalent of 14 additional buses will be available in January and February, but won't be enough to improve greatly Sonoma County service.

He said East Petaluma could easily use 10 buses daily and said he hoped the district directors would approve the purchase of additional buses.

Mayor Arthur N. Roberts suggested the district could improve service immediately by running a bus along Commerce Boulevard for the length of Rohnert Park, rather than bypassing the city on Highway 101. Luehring said that might be done after study.

Dr. Beaton Found Dead At Home

A San Rafael physician, depressed over financial matters, apparently took his own life with an overdose of drugs, San Rafael police reported.

The body of Dr. Alexander Hyatt Beaton, 45, was found in his bed about 4 p.m. yesterday by his wife Judy who had just returned from a trip, according to police.

An empty bottle of a prescription drug and some unmarked capsules were found in the bedroom and bathroom, police reported. There was no sign of violence, according to police.

Mrs. Beaton said she had been away since Wednesday but had called her husband every night, the last being Sunday night. She said that he had been depressed by financial matters, police reported.

Two notes were found in the house at 16 Tampa Drive, one in the form of a will and the other addressed to his wife, explained his financial difficulties, police reported.

Reagan Would Sign Either Of Two Wild Rivers Bills

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Gov. Ronald Reagan is willing to sign either of two rival "wild river" bills to prohibit dam building on the scenic Eel or other north coast streams, an aide said today.

"Both bills are basically acceptable," said Reagan press secretary Edwin Gray, adding that if both pass the legislature "the governor will have a tough choice to make."

The two bills—representing what many regard as the most controversial environmental issue before the legislature—were scheduled for back-to-back floor debates today in the Assembly. If passed, their final hurdle would be Senate concurrence in major Assembly amendments.

One bill, which environmentalists tend to support, is authored by freshman Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael. The other measure, nearly identical but more acceptable to water interests, is authored by the dean of the legislature, Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka.

Both, because of compromise amendments negotiated by the authors and the governor's office, would ban construction of any dam on the Eel River for 12 years.

The major difference is that the Behr bill also would prohibit the planning of any high rise dam during the 12-year moratorium. The Collier bill would direct the State Department of Water Resources to study flood control in the Eel River basin, including the general desirability of future dams.

Environmentalists feel the Behr bill is more likely to discourage dam building on the Eel after the moratorium.

It was on the Eel where one of the major environmental battles of the 1960s was fought. Reagan, siding with conservationists, blocked construction in 1969 of the Dos Rios Dam which would have flooded an Indian reservation at Round Valley in Mendocino County.

The Behr and Collier bills also would add several less controversial streams, including the Klamath, Smith and Trinity, to a new wild rivers system. These rivers would be protected from future dam development.

Behr said the Eel, Trinity and Klamath "provide the greatest existing runs of steelhead and silver salmon on the entire west coast." The Smith, he said, also "possesses extraordinary fishery, scenic and recreational values."

But he said "The Eel is where the battle lines will remain in danger."

"The Eel is not only the last and the greatest of California's free-flowing rivers, it is also the single most threatened target for at least five major projects that would leave it nothing but a string of stagnant pools with dams in between."

As the bills passed the Senate, Behr would have clamped a 20-year moratorium on Eel dam building and Collier's would have provided no moratorium at all.

Although the two measures now are nearly identical, there is an intense rivalry between the authors.

The rivers are in Collier's district. And the 70-year-old veteran of 34 years in the Senate not only is public works oriented but strongly believes a lawmaker should be the legislative guardian of his own district.

Collier is chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee and by far the more influential of the two. Behr faces a fight holding on to his Senate seat after the pending reapportionment. These are factors Reagan and legislators undoubtedly will consider when deciding which bill ultimately to support.

'Institutional Racism' Is Hit

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —A child with a French accent, even if he speaks very broken English, may be regarded by his teachers favorably, but a black student who has a heavy dialect often is not.

That's the opinion of Orlando L. Taylor, a prominent black speech expert in San Francisco Monday to attend the American Speech and Hearing Association convention.

This type of "institutional racism" often causes teachers to associate the continental accent with high learning ability while they "automatically track the student with a ghetto dialect into vocational classes, or even classes for the education handicapped," Taylor said.

"What has to be done," he said, "is get educators to realize the black dialect is just one of many mainstream American dialects."

Enjoy The Past But Don't Destroy It

The many antique and art shops that keep springing up in Marin reflect the nationwide nostalgia for the old and the rustic.

For most of us, an occasional stepping back into the pages of history and browsing around for mementos from the turn of the century are pleasant experiences. The change of pace provided by these experiences may even be healthy.

There is, however, an unpleasant side to this reviving interest in wood stoves, kerosene lamps, stained windows, and old bottles and utensils. What is apparently happening is that the memento seekers, not content with merely enjoying the picturesque and the quaint, are turning into avid collectors with the almighty dollar as their primary goal. They are converting their collection hobbies into a full-blown business venture.

ONE OF THE VICTIMS of this mania for the past is the old ghost town, for which the Mother Lode country in Northern California has been famous. Visitors from throughout the nation, and many of us from the Bay Area, have spent a leisurely week or a weekend poking through old mining towns, taking a few pictures and enjoying scenes and relics from the past.

According to news reports out of the old mining country, vandals are methodically tearing these old towns apart in search of mementos and artifacts.

Lee Symonds, historian of Mono County, reports an alarming increase in vandalism. "Up in Boulder Flat, someone hooked a four-wheel drive vehicle onto the porch of one of the cabins and jerked it away from the building," said Symonds.

Clyde Newlin of the California Division of Beaches and Parks had a similar report. "They'll even dismantle the interior walls, hoping to find something the owners may have cached away."

Associated Press quotes one official as saying that a team of pot hunters, as they are called, hired a helicopter to get into the rugged Inyo Mountains and practically dismantled one entire town.

THEY ARE ALL motivated by the soaring market value of antiques such as bottles, lamps and miner's kits.

It's getting so bad that many of the California park rangers are reluctant to tell people where the old mining towns or ghost towns are located for fear that the town might be demolished.

IT IS IRONIC that the growing nostalgia for the old and the quaint is the very force that is helping to destroy that which it seeks to preserve.

We hope that a few of the historic ghost towns will be preserved by private, public or joint effort before every log cabin and all miner's tools and mementos end up in the pot hunters' collections and on antique shop shelves.

When the wind-lashed rain comes down in buckets and outside we hear the water rushing and splashing in the gutters like a mountain stream, we take to our bed in the evening as if we were ailing. A good book or a pile of magazines and we are spirited away to Xanadu or Zanzibar or a sun-drenched South Pacific beach. Television is great — but the realms of the human imagination are far more wonderful.

There has been some dissatisfaction with Mills' leadership on the part of the members. Sen. Lawrence Walsh, a conservative Democrat, has been most vocal about a move to unseat Mills.

THE BIG PROBLEM has been to find someone willing around whom the members can rally.

For, aside from the division of the members on straight party affiliation, both the Republicans and Democrats have been irreconcilably split amongst themselves. The schisms have been so numerous at times that it has been difficult to find any three Senators in either group in agreement on anything.

BUT EVEN IF either party could get together behind somebody, the problem is finding someone willing to serve. Even if the only division in the Senate was that of party, the head that wears the crown under such a close division would be uneasy. But the Senate is further burdened with personal animosities which will never be erased as long as its present membership remains.

Both sides have capable men. Under the circumstances it is doubtful that any of them want the job.

The Democrats have Sen. Joe Kennick, well liked but most reluctant. Sen. Randolph Collier would be another possibility excepting, as chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee, he isn't interested. They also have Ralph C. Dills who is a strong and respected Senator with too much good sense to take on a thankless task. Sen. George Zenovich, an affable moderate who gets along with everybody, also is a potential.

THE REPUBLICANS seem to be a little thinner in candidates who could rally support. Sen. Fred Marler, who serves as minority leader, is a possibility. Another who seems to have the qualities of leadership is Dennis Carpenter. But Carpenter is relatively new on the scene, having been elected at a special election in 1970.

Assuming the members who are unhappy with Mills could persuade someone to make the bid, the next question would be how to get 21 votes in the present lineup. It would mean somebody would have to bolt party lines.

Oh, wow, just what I wanted!

Speak Out Against Criminal Coddling

Re injustices in penalizing crime. . . Three cheers for John P. Lippitt. . . As soon as a few more citizens get really mad about the way judges continue to set hardened, habitual criminals and other persons who commit crimes loose on society, the sooner the situation may change.

It is no longer enough for a judge to give a person a second chance. . . It is second, third, fourth etc. And the punishment administered in those few cases where this happens is most ridiculous as compared to the crime and the maximum punishment allowed or called for.

As more judges and their families fall prey to these people they themselves have turned loose on society to continue to perpetrate crimes on society, the situation will also change. More people must stand up and make themselves heard on this subject.

Youth Is Informed And Articulate

I'd like to put in a word for the teenagers of Mill Valley — and probably the county. At a recent hearing by the M.V. Planning Commission of an obscene plan to build 150 $45,000 units on Kite Hill near Camino Alto and East Blithedale, among the persons who spoke out to the Commission against the development were some of the most articulate and well-informed young people it has been my pleasure to hear in quite some time.

These soon-to-be voters not only were well-informed on the issues and the history of the areas of concern, but also they expressed their views in rational, precise language without the "y'knows" and "uhs..." and "ahs..." which have been used in profusion to lampoon their generation.

It looks like when the issues get down to the nitty-gritty — and God knows, in the shadow of Shelter Ridge Mill Valley is right in the middle of the nit and the grit — the kids are coming through with flying colors.

Bay Area Crusade Is Behind Schedule

For the past 10 years, I have had the privilege of serving as a volunteer on various panels of the budget committee of the United Bay Area Crusade. We on the panels make recommendations as to the amounts the 200 agencies of UBAC will receive. I have found that the panelists are dedicated men and women from all parts of the Bay Area communities who do their best with the donated funds and who take their responsibilities very seriously.

My main concern today is that we only have a few days left to the campaign and our goal of $17,000,000 has not been reached. The Bay Area has always been a leader in many ways, whether it be BART, baseball, opera or parks. Cleveland donated $9.71 per capita, Cincinnati $8.11, Detroit $7.74. And the Bay Area donated $4.85 per capita.

The year-round Crusade expenses (total cost of raising funds and of administration) amount to less than 10 cents on each dollar. Last year the donations were less than the year before — the result, less service for many.

I hope the public will respond favorably to the concept of federated giving. I hope the public will be generous this year so the many agencies of United Bay Area Crusade can continue to serve the people of the Bay Area. I hope the Bay Area will become No. 1 in philanthropy.

Not Ashamed Of Voting For Nixon

Regarding Mr. Burkhardt, the former German national being ashamed of those who voted for President Nixon.

As one who was forced to leave home — to watch his classmates and fellow Americans die because Germans regarded us as decadent inferior and therefore concluded they could rape and murder with impunity, May I remind Mr. Burkhardt that his Germany, the Germany of Hitler, faced an isolationist United States. The Germany of today exists because we gave our wealth to rebuild Europe. I am not ashamed of Mr. Nixon or my vote. I know Moscow stays east because we are not isolationists. Two alternatives are open to disenchanted immigrants.

1. Petition the Chappaquiddick senator and Geo. McGovern to stand in Congress as our Constitution provides and move that Congress vote on declaring a state of war.

A. If the vote is No! then all of our troops can come home immediately.

B. If the vote is Yes! then we can go all out to win, making sacrifices at home worthy of that we demand of our military.

The decision is one for Congress anytime some bigtime senator has the guts to do it. In the interim — if I were ashamed of America, I would go home to the land of the goose step and the gas chamber.

Tarzan's distinctive jungle call, used for generations to frighten wild animals and bring out the beast in Jane, is a fake.

Ex-Tarzan Buster Crabbe has confessed that the famous screech is a recording produced by three guys — one baritone, one soprano and a hog caller.

Even mating calls are being pre-recorded for presentation at a "more convenient time."

Nixon Weapon Against Press: Pick Em Off One At A Time

WASHINGTON — "The average American is just like the child in the family. You give him some responsibility and he is going to amount to something. He is going to do something."

"If, on the other hand, you make him completely dependent and pamper him and cater to him too much, you are going to make him soft, spoiled and eventually a very weak individual."

Who the targets were, the pampered and the weak, in that most significant passage in Garnett Horner's remarkable interview with the President we were never told. Were they the one-fourth of the nation living on or below the poverty level? Were they the 4,800,000 unemployed? Were they the women and children on relief? Were they the blind, the disabled, the aged living on pitifully inadequate allowances?

THE POST-ELECTION interview in the Washington Star-News should have been no surprise to anyone who had heard the President's Oct. 21 campaign speech on radio. So low key was the Nixon campaign that it got far less attention than it deserved. The President was asserting the right of the majority to dominate and the duty of leadership to respond to the majority view.

"The rights of each minority must be vigorously defended," the President said, "and each minority must be protected in the opportunity to have its opinion become accepted as the majority view. But on these basic concerns (busing, income redistribution, higher taxes) the majority view must prevail and leadership in a democracy is required to respond to that view."

IMPLIED AT LEAST in what the President said, as in the interview, was that to question the majority is a form of disloyalty to the system. Indeed it is disloyalty to the champion of the values of the majority as construed by the man who won one of the biggest landslides in history by promising to uphold those values.

The administration's selective attack on the media suggests that dissent itself is disloyal. Investigative reporting, searching out the truth behind the flow of official information, has long been one of the highest functions of American journalism. It has exposed crooks and frauds both in public and private life.

The selective attack began with Vice President Spiro Agnew. During his first years in the office his attacks on the Washington Post, the New York Times, and the television networks, with special attention to CBS were his trademark. Using his grandiose alliterative style he never failed to draw cheers from Republican audiences around the country. Attacking the ambassador of bad news, calling for his execution, how can you lose?

WITH AGNEW PURRING with good will, the attack has been taken up by Charles W. Colson, one of the President's key assistants in the White House. He went to Kennebunkport, Me., to make the New England Society of Newspaper Editors his forum for an attack on the Post, CBS and the Post's editor, Ben Bradlee.

More than any other paper the Post has pushed the investigation of the Watergate affair, linking it to H. R. Haldeman, a principal Nixon aide. Haldeman issued a vigorous denial and Colson made the Post accusation and the Haldeman denial the core of his attack.

A selective attack can be as effective as a broadside against all the media. It can be argued that it is more effective. You knock out one editor, one newspaper, and you can count on the message getting through to the others. Casting doubts on one network you spread the paralysis of caution through the industry.

PROFESSIONAL OBSERVERS of television, and among them foreigners not involved in the American game, believe that the Agnew assault had the effect the administration desired. The result was less aggressive reporting, fewer documentaries that might antagonize the powers that be. The big doubt can be as pervasive of distrust as the big lie.

By repression, by simply doing nothing, with rhetoric about the work ethic, a negative President can for a time obscure the grim deficiencies in American life. With some spectaculars he can obscure the imbalances in our world position related to the $100 billion plus budgetary deficit. Whether he can direct the management of a complex and troubled economy in the years ahead is quite another matter.

Stricter Measures Required To Cut Down On Air Piracy

The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

My job requires a lot of flying. I have not been hijacked. But I am frequently disconcerted by the lack of scrutiny which still prevails on many flights.

During the last two days, for example, I have had to make four flights. On two of them there was not the slightest effort to send passengers through an electronic metal-detecting device, or to search them or their luggage in any way.

On other flights, perhaps more than 50 per cent of the time lately, there has been rather careful screening. But the over-all system is haphazard and inconsistent. I suppose the airlines set up screening where they and the various police authorities are able to provide personnel. Otherwise—well, board the plane anyway.

CURIOSLY, THE most careful screening my wife and I encountered was nine months ago when we took an Air Algerie flight from Paris to Algiers. You would have thought that to be just about

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

Nov. 21, 1962

The Marin County Board of Supervisors refused to reappoint Matt A. Graham of San Anselmo to the Golden Gate Bridge District board, on which we had served for 20 years.

About 1,200 Bay Area Air Force reservists, who had been called to active duty because of the Cuban crisis, were released.

20 YEARS AGO

Nov. 21, 1952

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor since 1924, died at his Coshocton, Ohio, home at the age of 79.

Oil-soaked ducks were being picked from San Pablo Bay as the result of sinking of an Associated Oil Co. barge in the bay.

the last plane in the world to be hijacked. But police authorities at Orly airport, including a matron, gave us diligent search.

My wife's lipstick in her handbag was screwed up to see if it contained anything dangerous, and her can of hair spray was fished to see if it was real. Of course our bags were carefully searched, and our persons frisked. Nobody else, in scores of flights since, has gone over us so thoroughly.

IN THIS AGE of violence and crime, air piracy has turned out to be terribly tempting. Until the deep-seated conditions which have brought about this state are remedied, emergency measures will be needed. Thus I am sure the airlines and the government will have to take more seriously the search process.

It is also my conviction that the utmost confidence should be placed in the pilots of aircraft involved in such emergencies. These men, and also the stewardesses involved, have behaved with enormous courage and good sense. No forceful action should be undertaken without their approval.

IF THERE IS responsibility on the government and on the airlines, it weighs also on the news media. Of course we have to tell the public the essential facts of what is going on. Some details, if we know them, can be withheld during an emergency. For example, if a reporter learns of the terms of a negotiation in process, by listening to radio interchanges, and if his disclosure might harm the undertaking, he has every right and duty to hold back until no harm will be done.

But the worst danger, obviously, is to implant the idea of hijacking in an unbalanced mind. Criminals don't have to be told; they know already. Many of the hijackers, so far, have been unbalanced in some way or other. Perhaps the media can help to convince them that hijacking rarely succeeds. In very few proven cases — perhaps none — have hijackers got away with their loot. Many of the hijackers are now serving time. The notoriety they gain, and this may well be a prime motive for weakened minds, is overpowered by punishment.

THE ACTIONS OF the Cuban government in arresting hijackers, usually returning the ransom money, and seeking discussions of a hijacking agreement, are very responsible. The United States should welcome such a discussion, complicated as it may be by the presence of so many Cuban refugees and resources in the United States.

Air transport has made fantastic progress. It stands astride the world like a colossus, having subordinated all other forms of long-range transport. It has telescoped the world. Its openness and convenience have been among its great strengths, along with its steadily increasing factors of safety. These gains are now endangered by criminal action: sometimes mad, sometimes political. As with all crime, the best ultimate answer is to get at the causes. Meantime, precautionary measures can be made a whole lot better. They will be worth the cost.

Petaluma Means Business In Holding Down Development

The Petaluma Development Allotment board so far has shown developers it means business in containing growth and demanding top notch plans. The 17-member board appointed by the city council is charged with the responsibility of sifting through 16 applications and deciding which should be approved under the annual building limitation of 500 living units.

WHILE SOME at first thought the 500 limit was a bit

Corte Madera Woman, 21, Claims Attack

A 21 year old Corte Madera woman was raped last Monday by a man who picked her up after she hitchhiked to work in Larkspur, Corte Madera police reported yesterday.

The woman told police she was hitchhiking because her car had broken down at 8:15 a.m. The driver of an old green Volkswagen picked her up at Lakeside and Tamalpais drives.

He drove to the Marin Municipal Water District tank on Fairview Drive, then raped her, the woman told police.

Her attacker was described as between 21 and 25 years old, 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing about 165 pounds, with very short dark hair and a full moustache.

Searches of the surrounding area failed to locate the rapist, said police, and the investigation is continuing.

A television set valued at $350 was taken from a car parked near the Fairfax Theater Sunday, owner Patrick Kensell Williams, 4313 Cedar Street, San Anselmo, told police.

restrictive, it seems the board will be hard-pressed to find even 200 units that meet its requirements.

The board members — most of whom have no planning or public service experience — have done their work with a common sense approach. They look at each plan as if they were prospective residents or neighbors and seriously question the absence of parks, open space, bicycle trails and adequate school facilities.

Members have also made it plain they expect more from developers than ever before. Some believe that while subdividers haven't planned much this year in the way of amenities, they're more likely to do so next year if a tough policy is carried out.

WHEN DEVELOPERS personally appear before the board next week to explain their plans, some rough cross-examining can be expected. For some subdividers accustomed to having plans routinely approved, the session could prove unsettling. It could also be an indication of things to come.

The Petaluma plan to restrict growth has generated interest from other cities in all parts of the state. The desk of planning director William C. McGovern is usually littered with requests for details of the plan and information on how it's working.

THE EXPENSE OF mailing out the documents to all who request it has become a major concern according to McGovern.

Perhaps the answer — if the plan proves successful when it's completely carried out — is to sell the plan to other cities. The plan may not make the best-seller list, but at least the city won't go in the hole financially for being innovative.

State Dept. Cannot Penetrate Iron Veil Around Kissinger

WASHINGTON — The U.S. State Department has been in a swivet for the past several months. It has been unable to get any information as to what the intentions of the United States area. An emergency meeting of high-level State Department officials was called the other night at Foggy Bottom and from what our sources told us, it was very tense.

"Gentlemen, the Secretary is very disturbed. He feels it is impossible to make foreign policy for the United States when he has no idea what the enemy is thinking."

"You mean Hanoi?" someone asked.

"NO, DAMMIT, I mean Kissinger," the official said. "How can we set up any counter-thrusts when we have no idea what Kissinger plans to do? I don't mind telling you, gentlemen, our intelligence on the White House stinks."

"The only solution," said an assistant secretary, "is to plant our own man in the White House. We could equip him with the latest radio equipment, and he could transmit to us every day, by code, what Nixon and Kissinger are up to."

"It's too dangerous," the chief of intelligence operations said. "We've already lost three agents in two months. They seem to know everything we're doing."

"WHAT ABOUT PLANTING a woman on Kissinger? Maybe we could find out something that way."

"It won't work," said the intelligence officer. "The last woman we tried to plant on him fell in love with him, defected and is now writing a book about him. She took all our photographs of Kissinger."

An assistant secretary asked, "Why can't we get someone in the White House to defect and come over to our side?"

"WE'VE BEEN working on that," the intelligence officer said, "but it's almost impossible. The Defense Department is in the same shape we are, and they have a lot more money to bid for defectors than we do."

"I've never heard of a situation like this," another assistant secretary said. "We know what's going on in Peking, we know what's going on in Havana, we know what's going on in Cairo, but we have no idea what's going on 10 blocks from here."

"HAS ANYONE checked with the CIA lately?"

"They know as much as we do," the intelligence officer replied.

"You mean they haven't even been able to get a man into the White House?" someone asked.

"The only way they've been able to follow Kissinger's movements is by monitoring 'Voice of America'."

One of the lower high-level officials finally spoke up. "I know this sounds farfetched, but what if the State Department asked for diplomatic relations with the United States? We could set up an embassy here with an American ambassador."

"What good would that do?" someone asked.

"WELL, IT APPEARS that the White House usually briefs ambassadors of foreign countries before they brief us. If we had an American ambassador stationed in Washington, Nixon might tell him what he's up to and the ambassador could transmit the information to us."

"That's not such a crazy idea," an assistant secretary of state said. "If we had our own embassy in Washington we could give a dinner party for Kissinger and probably learn what's going on."

"TLL TAKE it up with the Secretary this afternoon," an executive assistant said. "In the meantime, no matter what you hear and no matter how inconsequential you think it is, report it right away. Perhaps, if we have enough clues from different sources, some pattern will emerge as to what their foreign policy is, and then we'll beat the S.O.B.s at their own game."

Slain Couple's Daughter Goes To Grandmother

STOCKTON (AP) — Heidi Willett, the 8-month-old daughter of a couple found slain and buried in separate Northern California locations, has been released to her grandmother and taken to the East Coast, officials reported yesterday.

Bill Goodman, San Joaquin County child welfare chief, said the baby was picked up Friday by Mrs. George Olmstead of Hamden, Conn., ending Heidi's week-long stay at the children's public assistance home.

Mrs. Olmstead is the mother of Lauren Willett, 19, whose body was found buried beneath a Stockton house Nov. 11, about a week after the headless body of her husband, James Willett, 26, was unearthed 110 miles to the northwest.

Wilderness Area Hearing Draws Overflow Crowd

FRESNO (UPD) — A proposal to establish a wilderness area where Sierra National Forest meets Sequoia National Forest attracted an overflow crowd to a weekend hearing here.

The U.S. Forest Service has proposed setting aside some 36,000 acres about 70 miles east of Fresno to be known as the Monarch Wilderness.

The day-long hearing Saturday attracted 250 persons.

Among those speaking in favor of the proposal was Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., who said the Forest Service should go even farther and include "some magnificent de facto wilderness next door."

Opponents of the proposal included Albert Devoe, district forester for the Western Wood Products Association.

Robson Trust Investigation Is Dropped

Robson Trust attorney Robert J. Dreher said yesterday that he has dropped his investigation of reported political uses of the Robson-Harrington Carriage House in San Anselmo.

He said that the popular park "probably won't revert to the trust because political uses of the facility appear inadvertent."

City ownership of the park appeared to be in jeopardy two weeks ago when Dreher received news that the city had approved fund raising parties at the carriage house for supervisorial candidates Barbara Boxer and William J. Filante. The will governing use of the park and grounds prohibits political events or commercial ventures.

Dreher said that he had received a letter from Mayor Warren R. Perry which "answers my questions on the matter. No further steps will be taken at this point. But if any future violation should occur, we'll be required to go to court and ask for instructions."

Perry said the flap resulted from an "honest misinterpretation" of the will. He said the fund raisers had occurred because of incomplete files in the parks and recreation department, personnel who did not know of the will's requirements and the belief of the parks and recreation commission that the Boxer event was nothing more than a Halloween party.

Perry told Dreher that new use applications for the park have been prepared and that doubtful applications will be turned down or referred to the city attorney.

Perry has pledged that use of the park will be monitored carefully in the future, according to Dreher.

Mrs. Boxer and Filante, meanwhile, have told the city they will return all profits made during fund raisers held at the carriage house.

Balloon Flight

International Aviation Month has begun. It honors the progress of flight since the first balloon jaunts. Two French brothers are credited with discovering the balloon principle. They filled large bags with smoke from straw fires. In 1783, the King of France ordered two condemned criminals to be the first humans to fly in a balloon. Jean Pilatre de Rozier protested that the privilege of "being the first man to navigate the air" should not belong to "low criminals." As a result, De Rozier himself made the first manned flight. The balloon rose 84 feet during the brief tethered flight.

DO YOU KNOW — How were balloons used in the American Civil War?

Conservationist In Council Bid

(One of a series of stories on the qualifications and background of candidates for the vacant seat on the San Rafael City Council.)

Richard C. Fox, a research chemist for Chevron Co., has applied for appointment to the San Rafael City Council seat vacated by the recent death of Harry A. Barbier.

Fox said he will run for election to the council in April, at which time Barbier's term expires, regardless of whether he is appointed to the post by the council.

Describing himself as a "conservative conservationist," Fox said if appointed he will strive to maintain a balance on the council between the "conservative fiscally conscious side" and the "aggressive conservation and idealistic side."

"If appointed I will avoid controversy and focus upon maintaining a balance between the two viewpoints aimed at constructive solutions," he said. The 45-year-old Fox lists the following as areas of concern:

PLANNING — He notes that the proposed countywide plan "can serve as a framework for San Rafael planning" and pledges to work closely with the planning commission.

HOUSING — He calls for more high-quality low-cost housing in San Rafael, saying the situation may require "high rises in blighted areas suitably spaced."

DOWNTOWN — "We should look at downtown San Francisco and adopt the good things and avoid the bad," he warns against "trying to bring Northgate into downtown San Rafael."

OPEN SPACE — He suggests creation of a park in the Canal area.

TRAFFIC — He calls for the overhauling or undergrounding of thorough traffic as a part of redevelopment.

FINANCING — "I feel that a bigger burden of financing San Rafael improvements should fall on the developer and new people coming in."

CITIZEN PARTICIPATION — He urges that the city encourage and listen to the Town Meeting Association, cultivate good press relations and rely on citizens rather than consultants. "Before an important matter comes up before the council how about grabbing a phone and calling up a dozen citizens at random in San Rafael and asking them what they think" he said.

Fox received his bachelor's degree in chemistry from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and won doctorate honors in chemistry from the University of Illinois.

He served as a private with the Army occupational force following the Korean War.

He is a member of St. Raphael's Church and has been active in Little League. He is a 17-year resident of San Rafael. He lives with his wife, Joan, at 127 Humboldt Street. The couple has three daughters and two sons.

Sunkist Is Loser In Antitrust Case

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Charles B. Renfrew Monday awarded $723,000 in damages to the Pacific Agricultural Export Association in its antitrust suit against Sunkist Growers.

The association, which had sought $3.6 million in damages, had accused Sunkist of conspiring to restrain trade and create a monopoly in the Hong Kong market.

Marinwood CSD Seeking Build Ban

The Marinwood Community Services District board last night asked the county planning commission to slap a 90-day building moratorium on district lands.

The board wants to freeze development proposals in the district pending the outcome of $600,000 bond election on Jan. 23 for open space acquisition, according to Genevieve T. Bolding, district manager.

Some areas currently proposed for development — including 20 acres owned by Paul Scheiner behind Loganberry Drive and 22 acres at the end of Limestone Grade off Highway 101 — may be included in the open space acquisition package, she said.

She said that Scheiner has proposed the subdivision of his land for development, and Valley Baptist Church has proposed a school, church and auditorium complex for the Limestone parcel.

The board last night opposed the church proposal and recommended that its master plan be rejected by the county planning commission.

The Marinwood Community Services District board also:

REZONING — Announced the planning commission will consider rezoning of Upper Lucas Valley from agricultural to residential district in January.

CADET — Referred to the fire commission a proposal that the district's full-time fire cadet be paid a monthly salary of $415 after asking what effect the change would have on district insurance coverage.

ROUMIGUIERE — Announced Supervisor Robert A. Roumiguere will attend the district's Dec. 18 board meeting to discuss open space, revenue sharing and other matters.

COURTS — Authorized the drafting of a joint powers agreement with the Dixie School District providing for two tennis courts at Miller Creek School.

RENOVATION — Approved renovation of the partitions dividing the community center at a cost of $2,800.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to 8 p.m. Dec. 18.

Family Planning

KUALA LUMPUR (UPI) — Distribution of oral contraceptives to Malaysians who have accepted family planning increased 10 per cent to 1.16 million last year.

COLD CASH CACHE LOST

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Old Mother Hubbard has nothing on Lewis Lesser.

He told police he'd moved out of his apartment recently, but it wasn't until the next day that he remembered he'd hidden $500 in the freezer.

He raced back to his old residence, but when he got there, the freezer was bare. Police are investigating.

Riles, Panel On Violence Hold Session

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — State Superintendent of Schools Wilson Riles met with his task force on school violence Monday, saying he was alarmed that California educational institutions have become "halls of fear."

The five-member task force has been instructed to confer with individuals and groups around the state and report back in six months with recommendations for new laws or programs that could ameliorate the problem of violence in the classroom, Riles said.

Riles met here with the task force and 200 student representatives, police officials, school administrators and community workers from various parts of the state.

He told them he has "become alarmed at the apparent rise in gang warfare and the physical attacks on students and teachers."

"The schools have served as involuntary battlegrounds for society's ills, and while the schools are not usually responsible for the causes, they are responsible for helping communities seek positive solutions."

There are twice as many assaults in Los Angeles classrooms this year as last year Riles said.

It is a "bumper crop year" for killings by juveniles, he said, with juveniles accounting for 20 per cent of the murder arrests in Los Angeles.

The task force is directed by Associate School Superintendent Kenneth J. Washington, head of the Los Angeles office of the state Department of Education.

Strong Opposition To Water Rate Hikes

The Dixie School District board last night registered vigorous opposition to a 70 per cent increase in water rates for school systems by the Marin Municipal Water District.

The board, concerned that the increase would cost the district an additional $7,000 annually, declared it will send a letter to the water district opposing the measure, according to Supt. Clifford W. Campbell.

The water district has proposed hiking water rates per cubic foot from 14.5 to 25 cents in July, Campbell said.

He said the hike is aimed at bringing rates for schools up to rates charged to others "but we just can't handle the extra expense."

The Dixie School District board also:

GIFTS — Accepted $2,700 from the Dixie School Parent Club for playground equipment and another $300 from the club for music programs.

TAXES — Asked the county for a $150,000 advance for anticipated tax revenues.

SABBATICAL — Said the deadline for teachers' sabbatical applications will be Jan. 15.

TESTING — Put over to Dec.

Joseph Magnin Slapped With $100,000 Suit

DENVER (UPI) — A man who was thrown out of a grand opening cocktail reception with poet Rod McKuen filed a $100,000 damage suit Monday against the Joseph Magnin department store.

Andrew P. T. Dolan said he, McKuen and Dr. Sam Steele were denied entrance to the store opening Oct. 16, even though they had invitations.

Dolan said that when the three men pushed their way in, one of the store's employees asked him: "Do you want to go to jail?"

The employee then threw him against the wall and out the door. Dolan also said he was pushed to the curb, had his clothes torn and suffered neck, back and shoulder injuries.

He asked for $50,000 for clothing, medical expenses and pain and suffering and $50,000 in exemplary damages for the "callous and reckless nature of the unprovoked attack."

Appeal On Development Due Tonight

The Sausalito Planning Commission's recent rejection of plans for a multimillion-dollar residential-commercial-recreational development on the city's waterfront will be appealed to the city council at 8 p.m. today in city hall.

Last month the commission turned down a proposal by O'Meara-Chandler, a Texas development firm, to build 223 residential units, a motel, restaurant, commercial area and marina on the 30-acre Schoonmaker property between Napa and Spring streets.

At that time the commission denied the firm's application for a conditional use permit for the project because it opposes further intense residential development on the northern waterfront.

In other business, the council will consider a revised noise control ordinance for the city, a houseboat ordinance.

Puppets To Play Christmas Role

By KAREN PETERSON

Funny faced stocking puppets with bright red tongues, moppy hair and jovial expressions will greet the children at Caymus Day Care Center in Rutherford, a school for the mentally handicapped child, when they celebrate at their Christmas party Dec. 6.

The puppets, which will also double as candy-filled Christmas stockings, are being made by the Marin Alumnae Club of Alpha Chi Omega. This is the second year the group, which has worked with Caymus for four years, has contributed the easy-to-make puppets. Collecting heaps of colorful lace, ribbons, tassels and remnants, the members let their imaginations go wild on the comical puppets.

"It's fun for us and fun for the children. It also serves a basic need," said Barbara Lockhart, altruism chairman for Alpha Chi Omega.

"The children seem to express themselves with the puppets," said member Ann Langham, as she explained the popularity of the puppets with the children. "It helps them come out of their shell and teaches them not to be so self-restricted. If a puppet makes the mistake, it doesn't seem so bad to the children.

"THE CHILDREN love to pretend with the puppets," she explained.

The club, which is the only Marin organization working with Caymus, has always worked with the mentally handicapped. For nine years the members worked with the Kindergarten for the Mentally Retarded in Marin. When it was taken over by the county and when Althena Getas, who had worked with KMR, started Caymus, the club started working with the center in Rutherford.

Although the puppets serve a worthwhile purpose, the club also helps with more tangible items. Members recently purchased a two-way mirror for Caymus and are now working toward supplying indoor-outdoor carpeting for a special work area for the children. These are long-term projects for items most needed at the center.

Sixteen puppets will be taken up to Caymus, although the center has only eight or nine children. The remaining puppets will be given to brothers and sisters visiting for the Christmas party.

HAND PUPPETS have always been an object of excitement for children. Imagination is the most important ingredient for these stocking puppets which have been decorated with scrap remnants.

They are a learning tool for the children at Caymus as well as a happy companion. Mrs. Karla Mahar (left) and Barbara Lockhart (right) model some of the finished products.

Skyrocket Divorce Rate Is Attacked

The divorce rate in 1970 was 1.5 per cent, maintains Dr. Michael Gordon, in contrast to statements leading the public to believe that the divorce rate has skyrocketed.

In an article, "Exploding the High Divorce Rate Myth," in the December issue of Family Circle, Dr. Gordon argues the high divorce statements and discusses changes in law, morals, and equality in and out of marriage.

"Generally, when you hear claims to the effect that divorce rates are reaching the 50 per cent mark," says Dr. Gordon, "this figure has been obtained by dividing the number of divorces in a given year by the number of marriages that take place that year." This does not include people married in previous years nor does it consider that an accurate picture of divorce risk includes everyone who is married, he maintained.

Dr. Gordon attributes the 0.5 per cent rise in divorces over the past 50 years to the new legal ease of getting a divorce and to a greater equality between men and women.

"Marriage has become a relationship in which individuals meet as equals... there are no longer the bonds of economic necessity and survival, but the frail thread of an interpersonal relationship," he said.

two or three words can be used in the definitions. She then copies the design, fills in the words and definitions on her typewriter, and the puzzle is ready for the publishers.

MRS. COLLINS'S WORKING hours vary according to the number and size of the puzzles ordered. A small puzzle takes about two hours to prepare, a large one a full day or more.

Usually she works three or four hours at a time and then turns to something else to give her mind a rest. She has no regular schedule.

"I just do it when I'm in the mood," she said.

But because she loves her work, she's "in the mood" a good deal of the time.

Oddly enough, her friends don't think her work unusual and seldom mention it. Perhaps some of them realize her ability, though. When they play their weekly game of Scrabble, she usually wins.

Underlining The Key To Quality Garments

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

What is it that separates the average homemade garment from the professional one that sells for hundreds of dollars?

For one thing, would you believe underlining?

"You can't see it from the outside, but it is always there in a good garment to provide the body that helps give the garment its shape and fit," advises long-time dress designer and award winner, Roxane, who has been a winner of the Coty and International Silk awards.

"WELL DRESSED women wear very simple clothes, but the beautiful fit and proper hang of their garments is due to the hidden work — underlinings, facings and interfacings, which are details a home sewer might think are unnecessary. It requires only a little extra effort and patience to fill in that gap between a cheap dress and a good one," she continued.

Given the opportunity to observe the difference in workmanship, a sewer wants to learn how to achieve a quality garment. Roxane has noticed when questions have been put to her at sewing seminars. Many women stay later to examine sewing details of the couture garments she shows.

Their interest motivated her last year to write a little book of basic information, "Sew Like a Pro." It was so successful, it now has been followed by "The Secret of Couture Sewing," which elaborates on the subject of designer techniques and provides hundreds of easy-to-follow illustrations and 40 patterns.

Armed with the same know-how as the pro, a home sewer might hitch her skills to designer techniques, but good fabrics are also necessary to give garment a look of quality.

"WHY WASTE time and effort on cheap fabric that will give you a bargain-basement type dress," she advises.

In addition to hidden underlinings, there are other tedious aspects of couture sewing. An enthusiast must be willing to use the iron every inch of the way, and she must baste and baste, and stitch and stitch. Some home sewers may be more absorbed in filling up their closets with instant dresses made by stitching up a couple of seams. But the alternative is worth the trouble, in her opinion.

As couture designer for Samuel Winston for 18 years, Roxane did her own fitting and draping. In addition to originating her own collections, she worked with designer Charles James and executed collections for Cecil Beaton and Valentina. In between retirements from various careers in the garment business and rearing three boys on a farm in Princeton, N.J., before the death of her husband, David Kamerstein, she executed many European collections — hand crocheted suits in Portugal, a boutique collection in London, knit collections in Italy.

WORKING WITH different sizes and shapes in many countries has made her realize that "nobody is built like commercial patterns." After selecting the nearest size, one must adapt the pattern to one's own shape, but she doesn't go along with the idea of "altering the actual pattern to adjust it for fit and measurements."

In her view every home sewer should have a dress dummy on which she can fit patterns of unbleached muslin. After fitting the muslin pattern to her body, she can return it to the dummy and pad it until her own shape is smoothly outlined. She then has a pattern that can be used whenever she works on a basic design.

WHEN YOU have two basic designs, you may have them all, she believes.

"Basic design principles are the foundation of fashion," she explained. "Two basic patterns may be all a woman needs to be dressed well — a shortwaist style for day and a basic pattern that may be made into afternoon, street and evening clothes, long or short, tailored or dressy. To adapt a pattern to fashion trends, you can open a seam for a looser fit or nip it in for a snugger fit," she advises.

BRANDON, FLA. — Perhaps you have a half-hour to wait before your plane leaves. Or there's a delay and you have a few minutes to wait for an appointment.

If you're like many people, you pass the time by solving a crossword puzzle. And if you're able to fill in most of the words, you have a secret feeling that you're pretty smart.

Perhaps you solve crosswords quickly, maybe you're even an expert, but have you ever tired making one? Or have you ever wondered who does create them? Many puzzles are made by professionals working on the staffs of magazines, but some are done by average people in their spare time.

One of these is Minnie Collins. This quiet, gentle octogenarian has been making puzzles for the past 25 years. She finds the work fascinating, fun and, best of all, profitable.

BORN IN Florida, Mrs. Collins has lived there all her life except for a few years when she and her husband moved to Oregon. It was there she began creating crossword puzzles because, as she said, "I was far from home, my husband was working long hours, and I needed something more than just housework to occupy my time."

It took a long time to complete her first two puzzles. Then she queried a publisher about them. He replied, "If you are an experienced constructor, we would be glad to see your work."

Knowing full well she was not an "experienced constructor," Mrs. Collins sent off her first two efforts. To her amazement, one was accepted: The other was returned with suggestions. Since then the experience has come.

There are various kinds of crossword puzzles. The simple ones are usually 13 by 13 (not inches but number of squares). The longer and more intricate are 19 by 19 and 23 by 23. The constructor is paid by the puzzle, and the price varies according to size.

The first step in constructing a puzzle is placing words in blank squares. It takes considerable time to make the words mesh according to their definitions. After this is complete, Mrs. Collins numbers the blocks and lists the definitions for each word. Not more than

Convention Of Feminist Party Set

The second National Feminist Party Convention will be held Friday through Monday at Glide Memorial Church in San Francisco.

Events are scheduled each day from 9 a.m. until midnight. All women and non-sexist men are welcome, according to the coordinators of the convention, Carolyn Evans, Susan Margolis and Kathryn Esmay, all of San Francisco.

The conference theme is Women Against Supporting Their Enemies (WASTE), and enemies include the medical profession, the church, the media, advertisers, prison guards, prostitutes' agents and other employers, according to the coordinators.

Workshops will be held Friday and Saturday afternoons. San Francisco Sheriff Richard Hongisto will participate in a workshop Friday at 2 p.m. on "The Invisible Prisoners — Women and Law, Police and Prisons."

Gregg Quits As League Director

Harold E. Gregg, who has served seven years as executive director of the Marin Conservation League, has resigned, effective March 31, 1972.

The 66-year-old architectural designer announced his plans to leave the league in a letter to members.

He said he intends to take "a full year to recreate, to travel, to try my hand at writing and to take care of some personal matters which cry for attention."

Gregg indicated no definite plans in the letter but said he probably would return to Marin after traveling and might be available "to help on special projects." He said, however, he does not think it fair to his successor to take a leave of absence.

During his tenure with the league, Gregg has often been a spokesman for conservation causes before public bodies. Last year he also held the president's post with the league.

He also has been active in other civic affairs, including the Young Men's Christian Association and the Family Service Agency.

Before going to work for the league, he operated a summer camp in Forest Knolls and designed homes and other buildings.

He and his wife, Frances, received a dissolution of their longtime marriage earlier this year. They have four grown children.

League members last night took no action on his resignation, according to Kay Holbrook, recording secretary.

Federal Judge Blocks Bid By Rap Brown

NEW YORK (UPI) — A federal judge Monday rejected an attempt by lawyers for black militant H. Rap Brown and three other defendants to move their trial for attempted murder and robbery from state to federal court.

Judge Milton Pollack, ruled there was "no basis for federal consideration" in the matter, and returned the case to Manhattan Supreme Court "There is nothing in this case that involves a violation of civil rights," he said.

Brown's attorney, former "Chicago Seven" lawyer William Kunstler, had argued that State Supreme court Justice George Carney had been unreasonable in refusing to grant a 60-day postponement to the defense.

Water Board Chief Will Resign

Eugene A. Miller, vice chairman of the Marin Municipal Water District board, announced his intention today to resign his board seat.

The 43-year-old director, vice president of the San Rafael firm of Harding, Miller, Lawson and Associates, consulting engineers, said he is quitting to devote more time to his business.

"Much as I enjoy being on the board, I have found I can no longer afford the very great amount of time which a director must devote to his duties," Miller told the Independent-Journal.

He was elected to the board in June of 1970, beating out three other contenders, to represent Division Four, which includes Mill Valley, part of Tamalpais Valley, Corte Madera west of Highway 101 and Kentfield. His term will expire in December of 1974.

Miller is a former director of the Homestead Valley Sanitary District and a member of the Sierra Club, the Marin Conser-

PERSONAL VISION — The energy of growth is still evident in these slender, barren trees against the silky fog of Inverness Ridge, as photographed by Jan Debye. It is one of 22 included in his exhibit of photos of California scenes at the Corte Madera Library through Nov. 30.

ART REVIEW

New Look For Familiar Scenes

By ADA GARFINKEL Jan Debye in his exhibit at the Corte Madera Regional Library. There is an unusual pristine freshness in the photography of

It is almost as if one were seeing familiar California sites in a new way — Yosemite, Point Lobos, Big Sur, Mount Whitney.

One of the explanations for this is technical.

Debye, who came to California to attend the San Francisco Art Institute after his graduation from Harvard, accounts for it in several ways. Primarily he credits his 4x5 view camera for its precision, for the solidity of substance and for the subtle transitions of tone and light which characterize his work.

Sometimes he photographs the same place at different times of the day which also allows for subtle variations. It often takes him two or three hours to shoot a particular view in order to catch the desired combination of light and mood which are decisive elements for him. And absolute control is needed — moving his tripod even slightly alters the shot.

Too, unlike the roll-film, hand camera which produces a small negative that becomes grainy when enlarged, Debye's photos retain their "fullness" because the individual plates he uses are the same size as the finished photo.

Furthermore, according to Debye, the larger camera enables deep and intense vision, greater intimacy and permits his own feelings to blend in.

Another factor may be the empathy with which he focuses on the most dramatic and significant aspect of his subject. Some examples are juniper trees with piercing, dragon-like limbs; the layered look of a tier of wild grass, black loam and the craggy Sierra Crest; and another of the rising, misty, cone-shaped "Pinnacles in Fog."

Sometimes Debye ventures into pictorial philosophy as in the startling "Statue Detail," the "Abandoned Movie Set" and the series of "Hands."

His intent is "to see and record... nature with the style and perception of a personal vision." And it is this personal vision combined with great patience and skill which arrests the eye and challenge's one's memory to roll back mental time.

What happens is that each scene is presented as if it had never been seen before; almost as if this cliff, tree or meadow had remained unseen until the moment of Debye's recording.

Viewing hours are from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday and Saturday. The exhibit will continue through Nov. 30.

Magnetic Floating Train Passes Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department announced Monday the first successful test in the United States of a magnetic system aimed at producing a floating high-speed train.

In an experiment conducted by Stanford Research Institute, Menlo Park, Calif., a 600-pound test vehicle traveled 250 feet in suspension above a 500-foot test track without touching it.

The four-wheel vehicle was held in suspension above the guideway track by a magnetic levitation system known as MAGNEV which uses magnets chilled in liquid helium as a source of the magnetic power which causes two like poles to repel each other. The experiment was conducted under contract with the Federal Railroad Administration in research on a system which the Transportation Department says has the potential to permit trains to go 300 miles an hour without physical contact with rails or guideway.

Campus Speaker Rule Extended For Year

LOS ANGELES (AP) — State college and university trustees voted yesterday to extend for one year their requirement that they be told whenever outside speakers invited to the campuses are paid more than $100. Vice Chancellor W. B. Langsdorf said the rule was first adopted a year ago to achieve a balance of viewpoints and because in several instances speakers were paid a very high fee. Willis Edwards, president of the Student Presidents Association, asked the Committee on Educational Policy to discontinue the ruling. He said speaker programs already were diversified and balanced. As an alternative Edwards suggested the rule should apply also to administration, faculty and staff invited speakers. Edwards' recommendation was not adopted. Roy T. Brophy, a member of the committee, said there is not speaker balance on the campuses and "we are just kidding ourselves if we think so." He said his reading of student newspapers showed some speakers willing to take no fee to get their philosophy across.

Another member, Robert A. Hornby, said he would like to see closer attention paid to the credentials of speakers. "Heretofore, all a speaker has needed is an open mouth and the vigor to keep it going," he said. Hornby said he would like more attention paid to identification, philosophical interest and their credentials to support their positions.

Safeway Seeks New Mill Valley Store

The Safeway store at the corner of Miller Avenue and Camino Alto in Mill Valley has submitted plans to tear down its existing building and an adjacent Arco service station and replace them with a new supermarket almost twice as large.

A new Arco gas pump island and an automatic car wash would be built at the corner of the parcel, near the intersection of Camino Alto and Miller Avenue.

The plans also call for razing a second service station, the Texaco station on Camino Alto. That station would be replaced with a "rest station" with bike racks, benches and landscaping.

Planned also is a new medical-dental building adjacent to the existing professional building at 61 Camino Alto.

Because the proposal eliminates two stations and construction of a new pump island, Safeway is uncertain about the reaction it can expect from the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District, which has recently proposed a ban on all new gas stations throughout the Bay Area.

Accordingly, Safeway has asked its application for the project be continued indefinitely by the planning department until the gas station ban is resolved.

The new Safeway would be about 6,000 square feet larger than the existing building. It would be constructed on a site about 30 feet west of its present location on Miller.

Report Due On Library Structure

An architect's report on a structural study of the San Rafael Public Library will be presented at the next meeting of the library board, which will be held Dec. 11 at 7:45 p.m. in the children's room at the library.

The meeting was set ahead one week at last night's board session, to get an earlier report from architect Andrew James Ring III and to avoid conflict with Christmas holidays. The report is in connection with plans for expansion of the library.

The board voted unanimously to place $4,285 willed to the library by Mrs. C. C. Webb in an interest-drawing deposit until expansion plans are completed, then to be used in the expanded quarters.

Librarian Vivian M. Smith reported Baker and Taylor Co., book distributor, has offered a 35 per cent discount from list price on trade books for the library — 10 per cent more than the discount received from Cottage Book Shop of San Rafael — if given a "major share" of the library's business.

She was instructed to find out what Baker and Taylor regards as a "major share" and report at a special meeting Dec. 4, also at 7:45 p.m. in the children's library, which otherwise will be devoted to a discussion of library policies.

San Rafael Man Is Sentenced On Check Count

A 25-year-old San Rafael man, who passed a fraudulent check for $194.83 at a San Rafael bar in July, was given a suspended state prison sentence and six months in jail by a Marin Superior Court judge yesterday.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner also placed Alexander Jose Semons on probation for three years and told him his jail time will be concurrent with a sentence pending in Salinas, Monterey County.

In that community he is charged with possessing heroin in 1968. Proceedings were suspended the following year when he was committed to the California Rehabilitation Center for treatment of drug addiction.

Semons has been arrested seven times for drug violations, according to a probation report.

He told a probation officer he cashed the check at George's Recreation Parlor July 6 to raise money to leave the country because he feared his parole was about to be revoked.

Semons cashed a check stolen May 16 from a Daly City service station, according to San Rafael police.

He pleaded guilty to the forged check charge last month.

Hearing Set In Assault Case

A preliminary hearing for a 48-year-old Marin City man, charged with assaulting his wife with a deadly weapon, was set yesterday for Dec. 5.

Municipal Court Judge Peter Allen Smith set the hearing after denying a motion to dismiss the felony count against Eugene Hall. His wife, Irene, had sought dismissal.

Hall was arrested Oct. 28 at his home after he allegedly threatened his wife with a gun when she said she was going shopping, according to sheriff's deputies.

Tam Refurbishing Puzzles Trustees

By MARY LEYDECKER

How did the new "educational leader" at decaying Tamalpais High School get $5,700 worth of refurbishing and furniture for his office?

In a short, but not simple, discussion last night, Tamalpais High School District trustees made a stab at trying to find the answer.

After inconclusive dialogue with several of the district's staff members, the trustees gave up and decided to wait until the bills, including ones for $3,440 worth of furniture, come in.

The educational leader is a post created in the district's three high schools last year as part of a reorganization plan which Supt. Wilber D. Hawkins said would save the district as much as $150,000 in administrative expenses.

Two other high schools, Redwood and Sir Francis Drake, have one man serving as chief of the school, but at Tamalpais High, Lawrence Sheppard, the new educational leader, shares his authority with Principal Raymond J. Bell, a holdover from earlier days.

Sheppard said last night he was promised "this kind of support" (a remodeled office) when he took the job.

Since a former conference room available for him was small, he said, specially designed "wall furniture" was ordered. The improvements also included an air conditioner, needed in cool Mill Valley to draw stale air out of the room.

Carpeting, draperies, wallpaper, a couch and chairs complete the new look in the office at the district's oldest high school.

"I still would insist (on the new furniture) if I had it to do over again," Sheppard said in conclusion.

Pressed with questions by trustees, Superintendent Hawkins said he had asked them by phone last September to approve remodeling of the office.

At least a couple of the trustees murmured they didn't remember any such phone call.

Furthermore, Hawkins said, in what appeared to be an attempt to end the whole discussion, the "bills haven't come in yet."

"Did we put this (job) out to bid?" Trustee Jerrold M. Ladar asked.

Business manager Frank A. Cassou answered that the district only advertises for bids on jobs that cost $8,000 or more.

"I have trouble coming to $3,000," Ladar said about the furniture and another trustee, Bette Wallace asked for a breakdown of the figures, "maybe as the bills come in."

Hawkins, who was asking the trustees to switch funds, mainly from the district's undistributed reserves, to pay for the office expenses, agreed to present the bills to the board at a later date.

He had also asked that the expense, not budgeted by the board, be paid for with transfers from such budgeted categories as pupil transportation and books.

Questioned by the Independent-Journal, Hawkins repeated his assertion that he had received board approval for the expenditures by telephone but would not say who actually ordered the furnishings.

In two other actions last night, the board took some steps to change its public image in the field of finances.

For the first time, trustees took a look at a list of conferences and the expenses for them before administrators and teachers attended such district-paid for meetings.

The new policy of preapproval of such expenditures was recently adopted in the wake of criticism of sums spent on travel, lodging and meals by employees and trustees.

The board, which also has had a practice in the past of approving district expenditures after they have been paid, adopted a new policy in which they will take a look at the bills first unless they involve legally required expenses or contract payments already approved.

Emergency transactions that require prompt payments may be paid by Hawkins, the board decided, as long as he provides an itemized accounting at the board's next regular meeting.

The board also heard a report from teachers and students on career education and work experience programs in the three schools.

Students Drop Out

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dropping out is popular with many in the student population. The National Advisory Council on Vocational Education reports that more than 750,000 youths drop out of high school each year. More than 850,000 others drop out of college each year.

Marinites On Coast Panel Nominee List

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO AIRPORT — The conglomerate of conservationist organizations that won voter approval of Proposition 20, the coastal initiative, has nominated five Marinites to a list of potential commissioners to plan the future of the state's ocean coastline.

The Coastal Alliance, meeting Saturday at the Airport Hilton, also nominated four Sonomans.

Named from Marin are William M. Roth of Ross, a veteran conservationist; Harold E. Gregg of Tiburon, president and executive director of the Marin Conservation League; Robert F. Rabb of Fairfax, Marin chairman of the People for a Golden Gate National Recreation Area and first vice president of the Marin Conservation League; Jerry Friedman of Point Reyes Station, head of the Environmental Action Committee of West Marin; and Phyllis Faber of Mill Valley, a high school biology teacher.

Sonomans nominated are Virginia Hechtman of Jenner, who led the successful fight several years ago to prevent dredging of the Russian River; William Kortum of Petaluma, Tom Crawford, and Chris Kjeldson.

The list of nominees will go to state officials with appointive powers. Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-North Hollywood, the Senate Rules Committee and Gov. Ronald Reagan are required by the initiative to appoint half of the 90 commissioners by Dec. 31. Local governments will appoint the other half.

Unidentified Man Leaps To His Death

An unidentified man, described by a witness as about 27 years old, leaped to his death yesterday from the Golden Gate Bridge, the California Highway Patrol has reported.

According to the patrol, the lone witness was San Francisco tow truck driver Darryl Strickland, who said, "I was driving in the right lane opposite subject when he suddenly climbed over the railing and jumped. I stopped and ran over to the railing, but was too late."

Drift markers were thrown off the bridge immediately after the man jumped, at about 5 p.m., but the coast guard was unable to recover the body.

Strickland described the man as about 27 years old, with brown hair and wearing a blue shirt, grey pants and brown shoes.

Bus Operation Back To Normal Following Strike

A surprise strike early yesterday by 19 Golden Gate Transit machinists ended as mysteriously as it began, and full bus service resumed today.

Pickets appeared yesterday at 4 a.m., forcing more than 7,000 bus commuters into their cars and causing a massive traffic crunch. The pickets departed at about 10:30 a.m., and their union never explained either action.

A secretary at Machinists Local No. 238 in San Rafael said no union official was available to discuss the strike.

The general manager of the Golden Gate Bridge District, Dale W. Luehring, said traffic this morning was heavier than normal, probably because some commuters did not return to bus use for fear of a second day strike.

Luehring said he was optimistic that the disagreement over wages can be resolved when negotiations with the union resume on Friday. He declined to speculate on the prospect of another announced strike.

Ross Trustees Defer On Teachers' Pay Hike Plea

Trustees of the Ross School District deferred action once again last night on a request by teachers for an additional 1.5 per cent salary increase over a 1.36 raise granted in June.

Supt. Thomas A. Anderson said the board met in closed session to instruct its negotiator on the request, with the matter left unresolved.

Teachers are seeking the new raise from a $5,000 difference in the salary of a long-time teacher who retired and an instructor hired to take her place.

In other business, the board created a separate student award in honor of kindergarten teacher Rena Safford, who retired after long service. Trustees earlier had discussed substituting the Safford award for its annual trustee honor to a deserving student.

Trustees, joining other Marin school boards, also opposed the Marin Municipal Water District plan to wipe out preferential rates for some public agencies.

Collee Trudeau was hired at an annual salary of $7,280 to replace Helen Butner, district secretary, who resigned.

Plans For New Museum Sought

Directors of the Louise A. Boyd Marin Museum of Science voted last night to contract with the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation to prepare preliminary plans for a new museum.

The facility is to be located on a site at the Marin Civic Center opposite the Veterans Memorial Building.

Cost of the preliminary plans will be $4,000.

The museum, now located on Albert Park Lane in San Rafael, plans to undertake a fund-raising campaign to cover construction costs.

Blaze Destroys Historic Home Built In 1886

Novato firemen today were investigating the cause of a fire that destroyed one of the city's landmarks, a onetime mansion known as Reichert Villa at 716 Lamont Avenue.

The rambling wooden home built in 1886, but unoccupied in the past few years and in disrepair, was fully ablaze when firemen arrived at 10:50 p.m. Saturday.

Fire Chief Jack Kidder said he hadn't yet estimated the damage, pending arrival of members of the Wilson family, owners of the home.

The onetime showplace was built in 1886 by Theodore Reichert, a San Francisco businessman, later occupied by Lord Pounding, a gentlemen farmer, and then became a family resort ranch, known as Rancho Novato, and owned by H. E. Hoes.

During World War II, the late Col. Meredith Wilson acquired the estate and his family remained there until 1970. Since then it has been vacant.

In Choosing Best Suit Be Sure To Can All The Tricks

If you're looking for the wisdom of the East there's still time to come on a bridge cruise with me, leaving San Francisco Nov. 28. The wisdom of South was very much in doubt when he played today's hand, but East is East and South is South, as Kipling once remarked.

DIAMONDS FIRST
West opened the five of hearts, and South won in dummy with the queen. He decided to go after diamonds rather than clubs.

Declarer took the king of diamonds, led another diamond to the ace and gave up a diamond. Unfortunately, the suit broke 4-2. West won with the nine of diamonds and returned a low heart.

Now the contract was doomed. Whenever the defenders got a diamond or a club trick they could run the rest of the hearts, defeating the contract.

Counting the tricks should point to the correct play. South can expect to win two easy tricks in each suit. Only one additional trick is needed for the contract.

BEGIN WITH CLUBS

With only one trick needed, South should begin with the king and ace of clubs. If both opponents follow suit on both tricks, the suit is sure to break favorably and South can give up one club trick. The last club is then a sure ninth trick.

If either opponent shows out on the first or second club, South can switch immediately to diamonds. He is thus in position to try for both suits if he begins with the clubs, but is dependent solely on the diamonds if he tackles that suit first.

ANOTHER LOOK

Incidentally, it would be correct to try for the diamonds if South had only seven fast tricks. He would then need two additional tricks, and the clubs would be useless for this purpose.

Strike Against Safeway Spreads To Retail Units

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A Teamsters strike against a regional Safeway distribution center spread Monday to Safeway retail stores as Sacramento area shoppers prepare for the Thanksgiving day rush.
About 150 truck drivers and another 175 warehousemen of Teamsters Local 150 were on strike against Safeway's distribution center.

Watergate Defendant Drops Suit

MIAMI (UPI) — Bernard Barker, a defendant in the Watergate political espionage case, dropped his $2 million damage suit against the Dade County state attorney Monday instead of delivering a pretrial statement.
Barker and his attorney, Henry Rothblatt of New York, appeared in response to a summons to give a pretrial statement in the damage suit. Any such statement could have been used against Barker when he goes to trial in federal court in Washington next year in connection with the June break-in at Democratic headquarters.
The suit against state attorney Richard Gerstein was an apparent attempt to block Barker's trial in Miami on charges of fraudulently using his notary public seal on a check linked to Republican party campaign funds.
Barker was convicted and given a 60-day suspended sentence on the notary fraud charges. He is appealing the conviction.

Old Charge Dismissed By Judge

A former San Quentin inmate who has faced felony charges for 20 years while in a mental institution has been freed of those old charges in Marin Superior Court.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner dismissed counts of assaulting with a knife and attacking a guard with a pipe for inmate Charles L. Hagadorn.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Vernon F. Smith said Hagadorn, age unknown, has been serving a life term since 1948 for attempted murder, attempted robbery and two counts of robbery.

Three days before Christmas in 1951 he allegedly made the two attacks at San Quentin. Four months later he was ruled insane and sent to the Department of Mental Hygiene for treatment.

This year he was judged sane enough to stand trial on the old charge, but Smith told Judge Gardiner there is little chance of convicting anyone with Hagadorn's mental history, especially in such an old case.

Psychiatrists who examined Hagadorn in 1952 concluded he was a schizophrenic, Smith said.

Reaction Split To Novato General Plan

By THERON A. NEWELL
Reaction to Novato's proposed new general plan divided along now familiar lines last night at a public hearing at the Pacheco School.

In the first of five public hearings by the Novato City Council on the plan, criticism was leveled at the council by large property owners and the Novato Chamber of Commerce.

Support for the plan came from the homeowners associations.

Phillip Coady, president of the chamber of commerce, said the council should make a study of the plan's impact on the community. The chamber has started its own, he said.

He said that of the 29,250 acres included in the plan, 64 per cent are in open water, agricultural and public and private scenic zones; 5 per cent commercial, industrial and office development and 31 per cent in single family, cluster homes and apartments.

"Your plan puts too much land where it can't be used and crowds future development into a small area," he said.

Coady said the council does not have an economic plan to acquire the scenic lands. He said it should figure the impact of the increase in taxes to buy the land and how much tax would be lost when it was taken off the tax rolls.

James L. Luis of A and P Building Co. of Petaluma, which constructed the apartments on Posada del Sol west of Highway 101 opposite Hamilton Air Force Base, said the plan's zoning of their more than 100 acres to open space "would amount to confiscating the land."

"The land is now worth $350,000 and as open space, it would not be worth anything," he said.

Robert Glasscock of 22 Woodland Court asked the council how it could afford to buy all the land designated for open space as the city now is so poor it can not fix its streets or bus its school children.

"You're forcing us to go broke," said Frank Rebelo of 1923 Novato Boulevard, who owns land between Pleasant Valley and Wild Horse Valley. He said the lower density proposed in the plan would make it financially impossible to develop the land.

Among those who supported the plan was John Richardson of the Forest Park Homeowners Association, who said he was "not in sympathy with the developers." He said he favors lowering the density in undeveloped areas and limiting the number of dwelling units to 400 to 500 per year.

Eric Kinsey, president of the South Novato Homeowners Association, agreed with the plan limiting population and keeping Novato "a good place for a family to live."

"I'm glad to see the emphasis in the plan on single-family homes because that is why we came here to live," said William R. Bills, president of the Marin Country Club Homeowners Association.

"Novato is one of the few cities in the metropolitan area that has a chance to determine its future by keeping the density down," said Robert Gooding of 18 Woodland Heights.

Patrick Healy of 5 Arlington Court favored the plan because it would limit development and he did not want anything to spoil his view.

John G. Stuber of the Murray-McCormick environment group, said the one-to-five-acre zoning in part of the plan would push up the cost of development to $20,000 per lot, which would require $80,000 to $100,000 homes.

The council has scheduled the next hearing on the general plan for 9 p.m., Nov. 30, at Olive School.

The council adjourned to 8 p.m. today at the Novato Community House for its regular meeting.

Antidisclosure Bill Is Advanced

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) —The State Assembly Judiciary Committee approved Monday the "Peter Bridge Bill," which would guard newsmen from being forced to disclose their confidential sources.

The measure, named after newsmen Peter Bridge who recently spent almost a month in jail because he refused to answer grand jury questions about his news sources, already has passed the state Senate.

It strengthens the 1960 state newsman's privilege act by protecting newsmen from government pressure to disclose either the source or part of the content of information obtained in the course of their work.

Tars' Cage Outlook: Guarded Optimism

Now that College of Marin's football program has been put in cold storage for a year, the Tars can take their sports indoors, off the streets and out of the soggy dampness.

It's time for basketball on the Kentfield campus and head coach John Panagakis is talking with guarded optimism. He has three players who saw a lot of action last year returning for seconds. He also has last year's top player out of the Marin County Athletic League and one of the stars of the previous Marin prep season. And he also has a new Smith.

The leading returnees of last year's Tar team which was in contention all season before a late fade are forward Joe Casteel, guard Joe DeMaestri and center Neil Traub. Tamalpais High School star of last year Will Garner will be going after the other starting forward spot and Dana La Ferriere, 6-foot-8, a cager out of San Marin High who played frosh ball at University of Idaho last year, will be fighting Traub for the starting center position.

The new Smith is Leonard, a cousin of last year's record-making Joe. Leonard played two years ago at Balboa High in San Francisco but sat out last season and worked instead. Like his cousin, Smith is a guard and although he's a fine ball handler, he's not the shooter Joe is. But who is? Joe established a two-year Marin scoring record with 1,146 points.

Jim Forni and Steve Pieper are returning sophomores who didn't get in much time last season, and they'll be joined by two other players of past Tar seasons, Mike Lindquist who played three years ago and Ken Gommeringer, a young man who played two years ago but sat out the 1971-72 campaign. Two new faces on Marin's team will be John Crozier of Novato High and Rich Hagler of Redwood.

"We've got some good players but we have a very long way to go," said Panagakis yesterday during a break in practice. In talking about early scrimmages the Tars played against San Francisco City College and Hartnell, Panagakis said, "I saw a lot of good things. But we're running a lot this year, so we were kicking the ball around quite a bit."

Marin fans can get their first look at the Tars Friday night when they open the season at home against College of San Mateo. The following night Marin will travel to Pleasant Hill to take on Diablo Valley College.

It's going to be tough to improve on last year's College of Marin team which won 25 of 29 games, but don't bet against them. They should again be a contender in the tough Camino Norte Conference.

BOB DOLMAN of Corte Madera, North Bay ticket chairman for the Shrine East-West game Dec. 30 at Candlestick Park, put one over on a buddy the other day.

Dolman was on a tour in Spain and he knew that Paul Shannon, potentate of the Islam Temple, was also going to be in the same hotel the same day. So Dolman found a sign in a Spanish shop that read, "Futbol," hung it around his neck, stuck some East-West tickets in his hat, and stood in the lobby. When he saw Shannon approaching, he started calling out, "East-West tickets for sale!"

Although Shannon got a big surprise and then a big laugh, I'm told he already had tickets to the game.

Ali Marking Time In The Foster Fight

STATELINE, Nev. (UPI) — Muhammad Ali, as he has been doing for more than a year and over a dozen fights, marks time against light heavyweight champion Bob Foster tonight when the two meet over 12 rounds at the Sahara-Tahoe Hotel.

"Let's face it," Ali said on the eve of the fight, "I have everything to lose and nothing to gain by fighting Foster, but I'm the man the public wants to see, so I keep on fighting."

What Ali is fighting for tonight is a $250,000 guarantee, which would give him a ring bankroll this year of over $2 million. He's also fighting to keep in shape while hopefully waiting for heavyweight champion Joe Frazier to give him a return crack at the title.

Ali, as might be expected, is the favorite, but at odds of only 7-5, down from 12-5 earlier mostly because the former heavyweight king has been experiencing breathing problems in Stateline's high, thin air.

Monday, Ali and his manager, Angelo Dundee, made one last pitch to the Nevada State Athletic Commission to permit the use of oxygen between rounds, but they were turned down. Nevada views the use of oxygen during a boxing match the same as it does the use of a stimulant.

Foster, who has fought before in the heavyweight ranks, is a solid puncher, capable of taking his man out with one blow. Obviously, he bases his chances on the ability to land a shot on Ali's chin.

Ali has predicted, but without much enthusiasm, that he will win the fight inside of eight rounds.

A crowd of 2,200 is anticipated with a live gate of $160,000. Foster has been guaranteed $125,000, so most of his guarantee and Ali's will come from the closed-circuit television pot.

The Redskins Seek Help From Niners

WASHINGTON (UPI) — George Allen is hoping the San Francisco 49ers can provide a Thanksgiving blessing in the Washington Redskins' bid for their first division championship since 1942.

"Now the pressure is on Dallas for Thursday," said a beaming Allen after the Redskins rallied from a 10-0 deficit to beat the Atlanta Falcons 24-13 in the nationally televised Monday night pro game.

"We're going to sit back and watch that one."

Washington's seventh straight victory was sparked by Larry Brown, who caught a pass for a touchdown and ran for one while surpassing the 1,000-yard rushing mark for the season. The win kept the Redskins a full game ahead of the defending world champion Cowboys, who play San Francisco in a nationally televised game Thanksgiving, shown on KPIX Channel 5, 12:30 p.m.

As a result of Atlanta's loss, the San Francisco 49ers climbed into a first place tie with the Los Angeles Rams in the National Football Conference Western Division at 5-4. The Falcons fell to third at 5-5.

Allen was in almost exuberant spirits after his East Division leaders boosted their record to 9-1 and moved within one game—a victory over Green Bay Sunday—of clinching no worse than the National Football Conference wild card playoff berth as best second-place team.

Brown, who had 82 yards to boost his 10-game total to a National Football League — leading 1,075, plunged one yard to score in the second quarter and took an 18-yard Billy Kilmer pass in the third period to put the Redskins ahead to stay 14-10.

Kilmer hit Jerry Smith from 12 yards out in the third quarter for an insurance touchdown af-

ROUGH EVENING — Atlanta Falcon quarterback Bob Berry (17) had his helmet shoved down over his eyes as was dropped for a loss by Washington Redskin defenders during the fourth period last night in Washington D.C. Berry and his Falcon teammates found the going tough in dropping a 24-13 National Football League decision to the Redskins.

49ers Vs. Cowboys In Dallas

DALLAS (UPI) — The Dallas Cowboys might be missing one key player and the San Francisco 49ers gaining one when the teams meet Thanksgiving Day in a game which will shape each team's National Football League playoff chances.

Dallas defensive tackle Bob Lilly, who has played in all 164 games since becoming a pro in 1961, was listed Monday as only "possible" for the 49ers game.

On the other side of the line, 49ers quarterback John Brodie was given a 50-50 chance of playing by Coach Dick Nolan. Brodie has been out for five weeks because of a sprained ankle, but is finally working back into playing shape.

"He has to get his timing back before he could be considered," Nolan said. "John worked out about 10 minutes last Saturday before San Francisco's 34-21 victory over Chicago, and he worked out a little today (Monday). It's the first time he has worked out since this happened. We will just have to wait and see how his leg does."

The 49ers moved directly to Dallas from Chicago because of the brief time to prepare for Thursday's game.

Lilly has been bothered by a foot injury all season, and bruised a knee two Sunday's ago against St. Louis. He aggravated the injury during the first quarter of Dallas' win last Sunday over Philadelphia. He

A.L. Rookie Of Year: Fisk

Red Sox Catcher Honored

NEW YORK (UPI)—Carlton Fisk of the Boston Red Sox, who took up catching in an effort to emulate his older brother, has parlayed exceptional defensive ability and unexpected batting power into the American League Rookie of the Year Award.

Fisk, who'll be 25 on Dec. 26, was the first A. L. rookie ever chosen to the honor unanimously. He received the votes of all 24 members of the Baseball Writers Association of America committee, comprised of two writers from each of the 12 league cities.

Frank Robinson of Cincinnati in 1956 and Willie McCovey of San Francisco in 1959 — both of the National League — are the only others who have been unanimously chosen.

The 6-foot-2, 205 pound backstop, born in Bellows Falls, Vt., caught in 131 games this past season and batted .293, the ninth best mark in the junior circuit. He smashed 22 home runs, a club record for catchers, and collected 61 runs-batted-in. In addition, Fisk belted 28 doubles and nine triples and scored 74 runs.

The 22 homers — which eclipsed the Red Sox record of 17 set in 1964 by Bob Tillman — and the 61 RBIs represent high-water marks for 1972 among the league's backstops.

"Carlton thought a good deal of his brother, Calvin," said Mrs. Leona Fisk, mother of the six Fisk children. "Calvin was a catcher (good enough to have signed a contract with the Baltimore Orioles' organization before hurting his arm) and this may have influenced Carlton."

"Of course, Carlton outgrew catching in the Little League. He always had a very strong arm, so he went on to become a pitcher in high school (at Charlestown, N. H.)."

"He resumed catching as a

BOWL CHOICE

Alabama Draws Fire From Ara

CHICAGO (UPI) — Notre Dame's Ara Parseghian thinks the Alabama Crimson Tide showed a streak of yellow in its decision to bypass an Orange Bowl rematch with Nebraska and play instead in the Cotton Bowl.

"Wpat burns me about the whole thing is that if we at Notre Dame had ducked the competition like Alabama is doing, we really would have been blasted," said Parseghian, doing a little blasting of his own.

Alabama, unbeaten and second-ranked, decided to play Texas in the Cotton Bowl rather than take a chance on a rematch with Nebraska, which walloped the Tide 38-6 in last year's Orange Bowl.

Even though that decision made it possible for Notre Dame to go to the Orange Bowl for the first time, Parseghian still chided the Tide for taking the easy route.

"The challenge, as far as I'm concerned, is to go back and play the team that beat you," Parseghian said, recounting Notre Dame's own situation of 1970.

"Two years ago, we were in that spot, with a choice between the Orange Bowl and the Cotton Bowl, and we elected to go back to the Cotton Bowl and play Texas, which had beaten us the year before," he said. "We chose the best competition."

"This time, we were not in the driver's seat—Alabama was. They were in position to select who they wanted to compete against and in what bowl they wanted to play."

"From everything I have heard and read, I believe they did not consider Texas to be as difficult an opponent (as Nebraska)."

Notre Dame, ranked No. 11 with an 8-1 record, figures to have its hands full with the Cornhuskers, who scored a 62-0 victory over Missouri the week before Missouri handed Notre Dame its only defeat. But before that, the Irish must play a regular-season finale at topranked Southern California.

Victories in those games, Parseghian said, should count more heavily toward a national title than whatever Alabama might do against Texas.

"I believe people would take into account the fact that we didn't back away from anyone like Alabama obviously is doing," he said.

Raider Smith Seeks Healthy Win Streak

OAKLAND (AP) — Charlie Smith of the Oakland Raiders is looking for a "healthy winning streak" and hopes the Raiders' second victory in a row is a good start.

The Raiders hope to crown Sunday's 37-20 triumph over Denver and their preceding week's win over Cincinnati with a victory next Sunday against Kansas City here.

"Everybody on this team is going to give all he's got against the Chiefs," running back Smith said Monday. "You know, every Raiders' team I've played on has had a healthy winning streak at one point in the season. We haven't had one this year, yet."

"It will be a very big game," Raiders' coach John Madden said about the 35th match with Kansas City.

He said he wanted to "savor" the victory over the Broncos. Tom Grimes, Raiders public relations director, said "about 200 people would like tickets. But I just talked to the Chiefs and they said they wouldn't be returning any."

The game has already sold out at the Coliseum, the 35th straight regular season sellout.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Bob Roper, a San Francisco sheriff's deputy, was the only contestant Sunday, and therefore the winner of the south end rowing club's midwinter swimming race. He did the quarter-mile in San Francisco Bay in 16 minutes, 34 seconds.

Powers' Role In Grid's Finest Hour

Football's Finest Hour. That's what they call the East-West Shrine charity classic. It is appropriately named.

The first East-West game was played in 1925. It made a $25,000 profit. Since then East-West games have earned more than $6 million. Every penny of profit has been pumped into Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children in San Francisco.

Over the years the earnings were used for improvements in the original hospital built in 1923 and to create a fund that would build a new hospital. Two years ago the new hospital was opened. It stands on 19th Avenue, several blocks south of Golden Gate Park, as a charitable monument to 2,500 college players and 99 coaches who have contributed their talents to East-West Games.

ON DEC. 30 the 48th East-West game will be played in Candlestick Park. Within the next few days Francis J. Powers, coordinator of the East-West selection committee, will announce this year's East-West teams.

Powers was on his way to cover the 1930 Rose Bowl game for the old Consolidated Press when he decided a detour to the then fledgling East-West game might prove newsworthy.

"I never had a better hunch," said Powers. "I got enough column material for a couple of weeks out of that 1930 game. Some think I first called the game 'Football's Finest Hour.' I wish I could claim credit for that. But it was Edith Roberts who came up with that description of the game in 1950 in an article for Coronet Magazine."

IN 1950 POWERS joined the official East-West family at the insistence of Bill Coffman, managing director of the game for 40 years.

Powers hated to leave newspapering but Coffman kept after him for five years. "Bill first brought up the subject in 1945 during one of his trips to Chicago where I then was based with the Chicago Daily News," said Powers. "He was a determined man and I finally agreed to move west five years later. I've never regretted it because I've never been associated with a more worthwhile football game. It truly is Football's Finest Hour."

Of all the East-West games he's seen in the past four decades what one was his favorite?

"FIRST OF ALL, let me say I've never seen a dull one," said Powers. "But the 1948 game is one I'll never forget. Johnny Lujack, Notre Dame's two-time All America quarterback, passed, ran and kicked flawlessly in that one."

"Lujack certainly was one of the greatest, if not the greatest, player in East-West history. Lujack, George Connor and Ziggy Czaroski made a remarkable Notre Dame trio in that 1948 game which the East won 40-8. They were all PT boat commanders in World War II."

"They never waited for an invitation to play in the '48 game. They called me in September that year and told me they were coming. Czaroski was captain of the '48 East team. He was a unanimous pick, including his own vote."

"After the election, Ziggy said: 'You didn't think I'd vote for anyone else?'"

Explosive Shrine West Team Backs

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Quarterbacks Dan Fouts of Oregon and Ty Paine of Washington State and wide receiver Steve Sweeney of California, three of the brightest stars in the Pacific 8 Conference this year, headed an explosive West backfield named Monday for the 48th Shrine East-West game Dec. 30.

The three were among the first five players officially accepting invitations for the game but at least a half dozen others, including linebacker Jim Merko of Stanford, tight end John Brady, defensive tackle Gordy Gunn and cornerback Calvin Jones, all of Washington, have indicated they are agreeable to playing the game which benefits the Shrine San Francisco Crippled Children's Hospital.

Also announced as officials in the game are wide receivers Isaac Curtis of San Diego State and Steve Holden of Arizona State. The two plus Sweeney give Fouts and Paine, two of the top quarterbacks in the nation, three excellent passing targets.

In selecting players for the East-West game officials are more intent on making picks that will insure frequent scoring. "We always try to provide a wide-open game, and it looks as if we are off to a good start with these first selections," said game director Ted Balliet.

With some bowl bids still up in the air and with Thanksgiving Day games still to be played, finalizing both teams involves some delay in picking the entire 28-man squads for each side, said Balliet.

But by the end of the week officials expect to have both teams pretty well set as well as the coaching staffs. Several of the coaches already named are from teams with chances to play in postseason bowl games, so replacements may have to be named for them.

Pacific-8 Basketball Coaches In Meeting

BURLINGAME (UPI) — Pacific-8 basketball coaches met with officials Sunday to study rule changes and discuss the coming season.

There wasn't one who claimed his team club could beat the National Collegiate Athletic Association Champion UCLA Bruins, although Ralph Miller of Oregon State did say he thought he would have a good team. His Beavers have lost only guard Fred Boyd from last year's club.

Kate Keyes—A Cross Country Runner With Heart, Ability

By LEW CODDINGTON

Krieg Vezie is well over six feet tall, and he dwarfed the doorway he was standing in. "She has some problems with her form," he was saying. Then he held his hand imposingly over his heart, "but she's got it here."

Slender and slight, and nowhere near as dramatic, Kate Keyes sat in the chair a few minutes later. "It's really an inspirational thing," she was saying, shyly picking her words. "You practice and practice, but you get something out of it that makes you want to keep going, that makes up for the bad things."

"It" is running. "Something" is much harder to define, but at the very least it includes recognition as the best female high school runner from Fort Baker to Siskiyou.

Kate Keyes last week won the girls exhibition race at the North Coast Section cross-country meet in Lafayette in 9:36 for one and a half muddy miles. For the achievement, she has been named Independent-Journal Prep of the Week.

Vezie is the head cross-country coach at Tampais High School, which Kate attends. He has coached champions before, but still he tends to rhapsodize. "When she worked out for the North Coast meet, she did a total of nine miles in an hour and a half on various different things," Vezie said. "Her dedication is amazing."

KATE KEYES

A 16-year-old junior, Kate has been competing only since last spring, when she ran track as a miler. She lost her first high school race, "but I decided I wouldn't lose another one," and she hasn't. Vezie figures she presently can do 5:20 for two miles on a track, within hailing distance of the national record of 5:09.

Her future is cloudy. She talks of getting a college track scholarship, but they are scarce for women. She and Vezie have made no firm decision yet about any Amateur Athletic Union affiliation, either.

Even her personal plans are hazy. "I'm interested in teaching, but I don't know if elementary or high school interests me more," she says. She currently is a teacher's aide at Tam. "But I'm also interested in the arts and language." Perhaps she can find an interdisciplinary major in Life.

Outside of school, she has a variety of interests, chiefly backpacking. She's also into music, and plays the piano.

The idea of running was her own, she says, and she has received encouragement, from her parents. "There never was any suggestion that this was an improper thing for a girl to do." Her sister Liza, 18, ran track at Tam before her, and her other sister Maggie, 14, will, if Kate's coaxing program succeeds.

"I have a friend who was forced into running, and that's not right," said Kate. "But I've found something I really like to do. I've never been pressured, so I enjoy it."

Kate Keyes is never pressured at home, and rarely pressured by her opponents on the track.

Ex-Dolphin Files A $200 Million Suit

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

MIAMI — Former Miami Dolphin offensive lineman Maxie Williams has filed a class action suit in federal court here against the team and the other 25 clubs in the National Football League for $200 million.

Williams, who played both guard and tackle and was a member of the original Dolphins in 1966, claims that NFL teams have been illegally withholding workmen's compensation from players who are put out of action by injuries.

Williams and his attorneys, Walter Lehman and Richard J. Beamish III, asked U.S. District Court to award $50 million in actual damages and $150 million in punitive damages.

The suit charges that a standard clause in NFL contracts provides that payment of a player while he is injured, is deemed to be an advance on any workman's compensation payments he might receive.

CHICAGO — A Cook County Circuit Court judge Monday issued an order restraining former Chicago Black Hawks hockey star Bobby Hull from playing with the Winnipeg Jets until the World Hockey Association posts a $2.5 million bond with U.S. District Court in Philadelphia.

Judge Francis T. Delaney entered the restraining order when member teams of the new WHA failed to post the bond by noon Monday as requested by U.S. District Court judge A. Leon Higginbotham.

Five Stars To Join The Pro Track Group

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Five more world-class track athletes, including gold medal winner Jim Hines and world record holder Warren Edmonson, will join the professional International Track Association, The Associated Press has learned.

Hines, a pro football failure after winning the 1968 Olympic 100-meter dash in world record time of 9.9 seconds, will attempt to make an athletic comeback.

Edmonson, who failed because of a leg injury to make this year's U.S. Olympic team, hopes to prove his 9.9 clocking was no fluke.

Hines is the only man ever to run the 100 meters in 9.9 twice. He did it at Sacramento, Calif., in the 1968 Amateur Athletic Union championships and then again in winning the gold medal at Mexico City. He was subsequently cut by the Miami Dolphins.

Edmonson, a UCLA graduate, won the National Collegiate Athletic Association 100-meter dash and then ran 9.9 in the U.S. Olympic Trials before injuring a leg.

"Then, the Red Sox signed him (as their No. 1 pick in the winter draft of 1967) after his freshman year."

For Boston, the emergence of Fisk as a first-rate star (he was the only rookie to be named to the A. L. All-Star team) was as a godsend — especially since the position of catcher has been marked by a paucity of talent throughout Red Sox history.

"I'm immensely happy to have contributed as much as I have to the club," said the young man who was nicknamed "Pudge" because of his childhood heft. "At the beginning of the year I felt that I may not make the club at all."

Duck Hunters Are A Special Breed

By AL GIDDINGS

This is a story about a duck hunt that, perhaps, will give you non-duck hunters an insight on why we duck hunters so enjoy the sport.

Marty Medin, Russ Ild and I had put in applications for the Sacramento Refuge for a duck hunt. If a person's application is drawn in the lottery, he can take a friend along. About a week later, we all got our cards back. We were in! So, we took Norman Quadros and Ben Selfridge along last Wednesday for the hunt. It was raining and windy. We arrived at the refuge (part of it is open to hunting) in plenty of time. We donned waders, hunting coats, winter underwear and rain gear, and with packs of decoys, started out to several ponds with which we were familiar.

MARTY AND BEN had their hot spot, the rest of us had ours. By 6:20 a.m., we had the decoys out and were ready to go. About 11 o'clock I had one bird to go, having two mallards, two sprig and two spoonies on the duck strap. Bruno, my springer, had retrieved all my downed birds, even locating two in some thick cover that might have been lost without him. After training him for two years, he is now coming into his own, which makes me considerably happy.

In the meantime, Quadros and Russ were getting their fair share of shooting, so things looked good. Then it started! I missed about four birds in a row which gave Quadros the opening for which he was looking. I heard his voice saying, "Hey, Al, if you can't hit 'em, let them sit in the decoys!" Naturally with other unknown hunters around, I gave him no acknowledgement; I didn't even look in his direction hoping that none of the strangers around would know at whom he is directing this barb.

FINALLY, I got another bird for a limit of seven and started in. Quadros then yelled, "Did Bruno find you a cripple?"

Upon reaching the camper, I met Bob Wilson and his potential son-in-law, Gary. They had one spoonie. Naturally I inwardly grinned, but tell him how sorry I was. He treated me to a beer and a sandwich, so I tried to pawn off my three spoonies on him. No dice. I suggested that he go out for the afternoon shoot, but a heavy rain squall sent him home. The spoofs! About then, Quadros and Russ showed up. Quadros had seven spoonies, Russ had five with a sprig and a gadwall. Then came Marty and Ben with one mallard! When they saw our 21 birds, they grabbed their decoys and literally ran out to the pond which we had just left. You see, it would have been mentally impossible for them to return home with one duck, when we had 21. Again, Russ, Quadros and I had that hidden grin.

THE THREE of us had lunch there, with Quadros badgering me about where I got the two sprig and two mallards and only three spoonies. (Spoonies are usually an inferior tasting duck — most shooters give them to their friends!)

As we were leaving, it rained like you wouldn't believe! We could see those two brave souls, Marty and Ben, out there huddled in their blind waiting it out. That night about 9 p.m., the phone rang and it was Marty. He said that he and Ben had ended up with two mallards, two sprig, two widegeon and eight spoonies. He was happy and so was I. Really. He was also completely exhausted, and when he described the hunt and the winds and rain, I knew why. He had to work Thursday, so I said I would pick his ducks. This made his day! This noble gesture might cause him to dig me some ghost shrimp sometime, you know.

HE ARRIVED the next morning with his birds, plus two that Ben had left for Marty's wife. I had 16 birds to pick. I then began to think that I must have been out of my mind the night before when I made the offer to pick his birds. I started at 8:30 A.M. and was just about finished when Marty walked in. He was so beat, that he had asked for the day off. We finished up the birds. They were all in top shape. It took three hours.

After that, we decided to drive into town to the Western Sport Shop for a couple of pheasant stamps. You wouldn't believe our reception. John Eberhardt, one of the congenial owners, upon seeing us coming, yelled, "Here comes the spoonie kids!" Then: "I hear you guys got 23 spoonies."

Even I hadn't known that. I made a quick mental tabulation and he was right! That Wilson had gotten his revenge; he had filled in John, and only God knows how many others, on one shot. Of course John, who shoots at an exclusive club said he got seven sprig. (Sprig are considered the top birds.)

Naturally, after such a put down we backed out of the store, not knowing we owed Wilson.

THAT NIGHT, I had my wife cook one sprig, one mallard and two spoonies. Here's the pay off: Those spoonies which were in top shape tasted every bit as good as the other birds. Honestly, you couldn't tell the difference. I ate a mallard and a spoonie. So I don't know; maybe us poor scratchers had just as good a day as anyone. I hope you can read the comradeship between the lines; it's the most important.

At the end of three sailboat races, Beutzow had a score of 4.5 with C. W. (Bill) Fox Sr., a quarter of a point off at 4.75 with low point man to be the winner.

C. W. (Bill) Fox Jr. was third at 9 points and Rick Osterlund fourth at 13 points.

The fourth and final race is scheduled to be held about 2 p.m. Saturday at Bel Marin Keys, according to William Osterlund, sail fleet captain.

Seals Visit Islanders Tonight

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — The California Seals will try to keep their one-game winning streak going tonight when they take on the New York Islanders in a National Hockey League match.

The cellar-dwelling Seals took Buffalo 5-1 last Friday night in Oakland, their first victory in nine games. One of those other games was a tie.

Defenseman Bob Stewart is expected to return to the ice after being injured two weeks ago in contest with Minnesota.

A victory would nudge the Seals, now 3-12-4, out of the basement in the NHL West. Not being last hasn't happened to the Californians since Oct. 27 when they won to tie it up with St. Louis. The Seals now trail the seventh place Blues by a point.

Bowler Soper Gets Brunswick Tourney Lead

CHICAGO (UPI) — Butch Soper, Tustin, Calif., rolled an eight-game series of 1821 Monday to move into first place after the opening round of the $85,000 Brunswick World Open tournament.

Soper, 23, a leading candidate for Rookie of the Year honors, shot games of 256, 234, 235, 169, 237, 230, 213, and 253.

Don Johnson, Akron, Ohio, was second with a total of 1785. Johnson is trying for his 20th Professional Bowling Association title. He is the defending champion.

All 192 bowlers, including six from foreign countries, will roll 18 qualifying games through Wednesday night after which their number will be cut to 64.

Sweeney Tabbed By Pacific-8

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Steve Sweeney, whose clutch touchdown grab in the final second of California's upset of Stanford, Monday was named offensive player of the week in the Pacific-8 Conference.

Sweeney, who was double and triple-teamed most of the game, took a seven-yard pass from quarterback Vince Ferragamo on the last play of the game to give Cal a 24-21 victory. It was the big wide receiver's 13th touchdown reception of the season, setting a conference record, and his 52nd catch of the year, tying a California school mark.

Sweeney also caught three other passes during the Stanford game, one of them a 20-yarder during Cal's victory drive.

NBA Rebound Lead Grabbed By Unseld

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wes Unseld got tired of playing second fiddle among rebounders and now is the National Basketball Association's first string carom catcher.

Unseld, ranked second in this category for each of his first four seasons in the league, made it to the top today by grabbing 48 rebounds in two games last week. The Baltimore Bullets pivotman is averaging 17 rebounds a game, compared to the 16.5 recorded by Wilt Chamberlain of Los Angeles through last Sunday's games.

Nate Archibald of Kansas City-Omaha continues his domination in scoring, leading the National Basketball Association with a 34.5 point average.

Architect Under Fire On Fire House Costs

Frustrated with the escalating price tag on the new fire station, the Mill Valley City Council last night laid some of the blame on the project's recently hired architect.

The council had previously estimated the new fire station at $275,000, but was recently told that it would cost closer to $350,000, or $75,000 more than the voters authorized in a bond election in April.

Bearer of the bad news two weeks ago was architect Matthew R. Mills, of Mills and Robinson of San Francisco. Mills was not present at last night's meeting.

Several members of the audience questioned Mills's conclusion that the original figure of $275,000 was unreasonable and suggested the council seek the advice of other architects.

In the brainstorming that followed, Councilman Gerald J. Hood suggested the council consider building a combined police and fire public safety building, rather than just a fire station. He said the federal government might make grant money available to Mill Valley if the price of the combined structure exceeded $275,000 available from the bonds.

"We obviously need a new police station and a new fire station," said Hood. "There is a possibility of dealing with both problems at once."

Mayor Jean S. Barnard suggested the council look into acquiring the old Purity Store property, at the northeast intersection of East Blithedale Avenue and Camini Alto. The Purity lot, she said, could save the city about $35,000 in soil preparation costs anticipated for the proposed building site at the intersection of Roque Moraes Drive and Sycamore Avenue.

Councilman Robert E. Capron said a swap of land between the city and the Mill Valley School District might be possible. He said the council could aid the school district by closing Old Mill Street, near Old Mill School, and allowing the school to use the abandoned street, in exchange for the school district's land on which the community recreation center is located.

Such a deal, he said, could not only save the city the expense of soil preparation at the proposed site, but also provide a centrally located site for the fire station.

After a brief discussion of the possible alternatives, the council returned to the grim price tag on the proposed station.

Developer Bradford H. McNutt said he thought $350,000 was too much for the city's proposed 6,000-square-foot building. He said comparable fire stations in the Bay Area did not cost nearly as much.

He told the council it ought to set a figure and then seek an architect who can design a building at that price. He said the council was mistaken to hire an architect and then have him increase the price tag beyond the city's budget.

Councilmen Hood and Edward J. Boesenecker and Mayor Barnard reaffirmed their commitment to a fire station at any price, but Capron expressed grave reservations.

He said he could foresee a staggering tax rate of $3.54 per $100 assessed valuation next year if the council went ahead with the fire station and its proposed $1.5 million sewer infiltration program.

That would increase the tax rate by 70 cents in one year, he said.

If the council added in the fire station's five new employees and the anticipated levy for the countywide open space district, the tax rate could soar to $3.75 next year, he computed.

"We are nowhere near ready to vote (on the fire station) until that $3.54 tax rate is not in the picture, because none of us are going to vote for that figure next July."

The current tax rate is $2.84 per $100 assessed valuation.

McNutt urged the council to add a few builders to the council's fire station building committee and then look for additional estimates on the project.

The council appointed McNutt and builder Peter Haywood to the committee and agreed to study the alternatives suggested by Hood, Capron and Mrs. Barnard.

Women's Lobby Asks Housewife Social Security

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Women's Lobby, Inc., wants Congress to pass a national abortion act and bring housewives under Social Security.

The women's rights group said Monday it would take the issues to the 93rd Congress, which convenes in January. The lobby's president, Carol Burris, said the organization also would push for a child care program, an increase in the minimum wage, and legislation to assure women have equal rights in any pension vesting plan Congress considers.

The child care program was passed by Congress last session but vetoed by President Nixon.

The proposed abortion bill would prohibit states from passing laws banning abortion. The lobby's spokesman said housewives should be covered by Social Security just as their working husbands are.

Okinawans Elect An Anti-American

NAHA, Okinawa (UPI) — Yoshimatsu Taira, who had the support of the Japan Socialist party and the Okinawan branch of the Japan Communist party was re-elected mayor Monday on a platform demanding withdrawal of the 40,000 American servicemen stationed at bases on Okinawa and the Ryukyu Islands.

It was the first mayoral election in Naha since Okinawa reverted to Japan rule last May 15 after 27 years of American rule.

Action Is Postponed On Mysterious Fill

The Mill Valley City Council again last night heard that someone has been filling in portions of the marsh behind Goodman's Supply Co., west of Highway 101, but postponed any action until a full hearing on the mysterious dumping can be held Dec. 4. (Another Mill Valley Council story, page 1.)

As in the past, the council heard conflicting reports of alleged dumping at several spots along the edge of the marsh, between Goodman's Supply and the Hi Ho Motel.

Councilman Robert E. Capron reported that the staff of the Bay Conservation and Development Commission had notified him that the marsh was definitely shrinking. He said the commission's records indicate filling has undoubtedly taken place during recent weeks.

Planning Commissioner John DeBecker, a civil engineer, said he has recently made his own, private investigation and concluded that a contractor had probably pushed the dirt into the marsh.

"Excluding Santa Claus, I can only assume that a contractor pushed it out there," said DeBecker of the mysterious fill.

New Commander

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gen. William B. Rosson has been named the new commander-in-chief of the U.S. Southern Command, which has its headquarters in the Panama Canal Zone.

said Bala, "I'm sure it is dumped by some other contractor." He said it was very difficult to police the city and catch contractors illegally dumping fill on open city land.

Planning Commission chairman Ivan S. Poutiatine urged the council to enforce its recently adopted fill ordinance. He said it was futile to pass ordinances if the council couldn't enforce them.

A representative of the Army Corps of Engineers, that also claimed there is illegal fill in the marsh, said it was the responsibility of the property owner, Goodman's Supply Co., to see that no filling takes place on its land.

Richard Harris, an owner of Goodman's and the property, said he knew of no recent dumping and had just learned of the complaints yesterday morning.

He said the only dumping in the marsh he was aware of took place accidentally about three or four months ago.

He asked the council to postpone a pending motion to seek outside assistance from the district attorney, county health department and Army Corps of Engineers until he could consult his attorney.

Capron withdrew his motion and suggested the council hold a full-fledged hearing Dec. 4.

The council agreed and then asked City Atty. Leland H. Jordan to show up with alternative ways of enforcing the city's fill regulation ordinance.

Council To Consider Bus Depot's Future

The Mill Valley City Council last night heard more criticism of youths congregating in front of the Mill Valley Bus Depot and agreed to consider the depot's future Dec. 4, after the planning commission has offered its recommendations.

The council did not act on a request to remove permanently the benches in front of the depot, but did ask the police department to step up its patrol of the area.

Several members of the audience connected the benches and the youths who congregate in front of the depot to the noon shooting of one man behind the bus depot last Friday.

The Mill Valley City Council Also:

PLANNING — Instructed Planning Director Tom W. Newton to consider the preparation of the city's general plan a higher priority than the review of building plans for development which cannot be constructed until the sewer ban is lifted by the Regional Water Quality Control Board. The council policy stemmed from a suggestion by Councilman Gerald J. Hood that the city adopt a moratorium on all new building plans to enable the planning department to concentrate on the general plan.

PLANNING COMMISSION — Agreed to interview two candidates for the planning commission, Gregory Dyer and Louis Millin, in closed session at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 4. Dyer and Millin, along with current Planning Commissioner Marlene Kaulum, and anyone else who applies, will be considered for two openings on the commission.

HUMAN RIGHTS — Agreed to interview Rae Johnstone and Robert C. DaCosta for the human rights miniboard, but set no interview date.

CLOSED SESSION — Scheduled a closed session Dec. 5 to hear charges and complaints against a city employee.

WATER TAPS — Instructed city attorney to draft an ordinance which would require all buildings in commercial zones to have at least one water tap on the outside front of the building to enable store owners to hose down their sidewalks.

HORSES — Continued to Dec. 4, for more staff information, a petition with 29 signatures protesting the smell, dust and flies which accompany the horses that are pastured on Kite Hill. No signer of the petition or horse owner was present.

POLICE CAR — Authorized $3,200 from the city's equipment replacement fund for the purchase of a third new police car this year, rather than two as originally budgeted.

FEE EXEMPTION — Passed the first reading of an ordinance which would exempt all public agencies from the fees normally required for grading or excavating permits. The ordinance was requested by the Marin Municipal Water District.

PARKING — Continued to Dec. 4, a proposed ordinance which would prohibit parking from 3 a.m. to 6 a.m. on the north side of East Blithedale Avenue, between Alta Vista and Camino Alto, and on Madrona Street, between Throckmorton and Lovell avenues.

COMBINING DISTRICT — Passed the first reading, without any discussion, of an ordinance which would work to improve and encourage business in Mill Valley. The council recommended the group, if established, be named something more appropriate, such as the Mill Valley Civic Improvement Association, rather than the controversial term, redevelopment commission.

ENGINEERING FEES — Authorized up to $3,000 to pay City Engineer Stanley M. Bala for drawing specifications for the city's Miller Avenue improvement plan.

SEWER WORK — Awarded a $6,489.00 contract for sewer main repairs in Sutton Manor to Maggiora and Ghilotti of Corte Madera.

CLOSED SESSION — Went into closed session at the end of the meeting to discuss pending litigation.

MEETING — Adjourned to a special meeting with the library board at 8 p.m. Nov. 27 in the library board room to discuss the financial situation at the library.

Elvis Schedules Benefit Concert

HONOLULU (UPI) — Elvis Presley said Monday he would perform in a benefit concert, televised worldwide via satellite, for cancer research in Hawaii.

The singer said the benefit would be for the Kui Lee Cancer Fund. Kui Lee, a songwriter, died of cancer in 1966. He wrote "I'll Remember You," a regular in Presley's repertoire. The one-hour concert, to be broadcast from the Honolulu International Center Jan. 14, 1973, will be beamed into American homes on the National Broadcasting Co. network.
